Woman Puts Fist Through Windshield to Hit Officer

4 POLICEMEN GUILTY; DROPPED

WOMAN AUTOIST ATTACKS OFFICER

Puts Fist Through Windshield and Is Arrested on Drunk Charge

When a patrolman at Fields Corner stepped on the running-board of an automobile to inquire why the driver was steering an uncertain course he was met right through the windshield by the fist of pretty Mrs. Catherine Owens, No 84 Eustis street.

This was the testimony offered before Judge Churchill in the Dorchester court today where Mrs. Owens, aged twenty, was arraigned on a charge of drunkenness.

According to the officers, Mrs. Owens was riding in the car with her husband.

She argued with Mr. Owens until he lost control of the machine. It nearly hit another. The policeman took a hand.

He halted the auto and stepped onto the running board.

Mrs. Owens didn't want him there. It seemed, so she took the most direct way of getting him off.

The windshield happened to be between her and the officer, but that didn't mean a thing to her. She brought a right all the way up from the seat.

Right through the windshield and into the face of the patrolman thudded the fist. She was placed under arrest and charged with drunkenness. She pleaded guilty today and the case was placed on file.

RESCUE 24 STRANDED ON FISHING SLOOP

Rockaway Beach, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Twenty-four deep sea voyagers, including ten women and three children, most of whom were seasick, were rescued today by a police launch from the sloop Stindrust, which had gone aground in Rockaway inlet. The sloop was returning from a deep sea fishing excursion when the heavy tides washed her ashore.

Gone From Home

LUCY PILUSA
Winchester girl of fifteen, whose parents have obtained a warrant charging suitor with abduction.

GIRL MISSING; SUITOR SOUGHT AS ABDUCTOR

Somewhere in Boston today, a mother frantic with fear and grief, is searching for her fifteen-year-old daughter, the "apple of her eye."

The mother is Mrs. Frances Pilusa of No. 21 Spruce street, Winchester. The girl is Lucy, dark-haired, brown-eyed and a mere slip of a lass for her years.

The bugle notes of romance have sounded early in little Lucy's quiet life in Winchester. "Oh Lucy's got a feller," was the cry in the Pilusa neighborhood a short time ago.

The "feller" called only once at the Pilusa home, when he professed ardent love for little Lucy. He is twenty-five. Mrs. Pilusa told him her little girl was not old enough to think of marriage. And he went away.

And today a warrant for the arrest of the "feller," Paul Maurelli of No. 46 Cross street, North End, on a charge of abducting Lucy, was sworn out by Attorney James T. Maguire, council for the girl's parents. A warrant for the arrest of Lucy on a technical charge was also issued.

Heir to Million in Court

DIVORCED WIFE ASKS ALIMONY

Dorchester Man Is Charged With Being in Arrears Since March, 1916

Walter F. Sykes of Dorchester, reputed heir to a million-dollar estate, was in the equity motion session of Superior Court today on proceedings charging him with failing to pay his former wife $5 a week.

Lulu M. Sykes obtained a divorce in June, 1914, and Sykes was ordered to pay $5 a week for her support and that of their minor daughter Elizabeth. According to Attorney James W. Milne of No. 18 Tremont street, payments were made up to March 20, 1916.

The former Mrs. Sykes, now Mrs. Wittig of Brooklyn, N. Y., no longer asks alimony on her account, but wants the court to have Sykes make provision for the daughter, now twelve years old, and living with her mother.

Judge Keating was told that Sykes intended to transfer his interest under his father's will, and the court was asked to enjoin him. The case was continued for one month and Sykes stipulated he would take no action in the meantime.

$40,000 GARAGE IN LENOX BURNED

Lenox, Aug. 21.—Mrs. John E. Alexander of New York was about to step into her automobile at the front door of her "Spring Lawn" estate here today when the telephone rang.

A servant answered the telephone and rushing out, excitedly informed Mrs. Alexander that the garage was afire. The fire department was then notified but the building was destroyed with a loss estimated at $40,000. The chauffeur, William A. Gallagher, and his wife had an apartment in the garage. This was the second time they have been burned out in two years. Today's fire was caused by spontaneous combustion in hay.

FOUR PERISH IN INCENDIARY FIRE

Elizabeth, N. J., Aug. 21.—Four persons were burned to death in a fire early today in a tenement house, which the police believe was of incendiary origin. The dead were a man, a woman and two boys and all the bodies were burned beyond possibility of recognition. The fire started in a passageway between the burned house and the next building and spread rapidly.

WOMAN STRUCK BY AN AUTO MAY DIE

Nellie Barrett, fifty-five years old, of No. 1 Brewster street, South Boston, was knocked down by an automobile driven by George Fyler, when she attempted to cross Broadway today. At the Carney Hospital it was was found she had sustained a fractured skull. She may die.

TRAPS HUSBAND AND GIRLS IN POLICE RAID

MRS. HERBERT W. EDWARDS
Back Bay wife who declares it wasn't the first time she had played detective on an alleged erring mate. She says she caught her first husband the same way, then divorced him. Now she plans to divorce the second.

GIRLS CAUGHT WITH MARRIED MAN HELD

Ida Baker and Elizabeth Verdi, the latter said to be a married woman with three children in Washington, arrested during a spectacular raid led by an outraged wife at No. 418 Massachusetts avenue, were arraigned in Municipal Court today.

Arraigned with them were John L. Barlow, owner of the raided flat, and Herbert W. Edwards of No. 518 Massachusetts avenue, whose wife climbed a fire escape and entered through a back window to conduct the raid.

The quartet were charged with statutory offenses, and their cases were continued a week for investigation by the probation department.

CONSPIRACY IS CHARGED BY MAJOR NICHOLSON

Major Malcolm Wheeler-Nicholson, before the board of inquiry at the army base, charges that his troubles are all due to a conspiracy on the part of Major-General Frederick Sladen.

His records, introduced today, allege that General Sladen, with Colonel F. D. Dugan and Major-General Bailey, were angered at him because he defended petty officers from persecution by superior officers.

In order to punish him, he charges, General Sladen ordered him away from Coblenz at a time when his wife, who was with him, expected to become a mother.

In view of the fact that it was after the armistice Major Nicholson felt that he should be with his wife.

However, he said, he obeyed orders and went back to America, leaving Mrs. Nicholson alone in Coblenz. Later he returned to Germany. He said he found his wife, after incredible hardships, had made her way to Stockholm, where the baby was born.

The War Department was accused of keeping back some of the records of the case against Major Nicholson, who is charged with writing a letter to President Harding containing statements that there was Prussianism in the American army.

"I protest that the War Department is keeping back some of the records of this man," declared William J. Flaherty, counsel for the major.

"There is no use going on with this board of inquiry until we have all the records here. I appeal to your common sense. You would not

WOMAN ROUTS THIEVES

Burglars Believed to Have Used Small Boy as Accomplice in Swampscott Break

The alertness and bravery of Mrs. Annette V. Becker, daughter of Simon Vorenberg, Boston merchant, drove burglars from the Vorenberg home in Swampscott before they had taken anything of value.

Mrs. Becker arose during the night to care for her mother, who was ill in another room. As she walked into the hall she heard someone moving in the house.

"Who is there?" she called.

There was no reply. Rushing in the direction from which she had heard the noise she came upon a man fleeing downstairs. She followed at his heels until he dashed out a rear door. Then she called the Swampscott police.

Investigation revealed the burglars had gained entrance by a rear window. The window is so small that only a small child could get through.

The police believe the burglars had a boy, one under eight years of age, with them, and that they pushed him through to open the door.

The thieves had taken two fountain pens and some cigars from the first floor, but were scared away before they got to thousands of dollars' worth of jewelry on the second.

Says G. O. P. Gone Mad

Eugene N. Foss, speaking to the employes of the Walworth Manufacturing Company, South Boston, today, discussed the tariff and said the Republican party had surely gone mad. He said they have lost sight of the people's welfare and deserve defeat.

MISS LENA BARRISONO.
Vivacious sixteen-year-old Lena is accused by her Lynn neighbor of placing lighted candles and painting a black smudge on her porch. Lena denies the accusation and threatens dire consequences to Mrs. Schwartz.

FUNERAL RITES FAN FEUD OF NEIGHBORS

"Moonshine Alley, Lynn, is divided into hostile camps today, the neighborhood being lined up on one side or the other of the Barrisano-Schwartz feud. The feud began two years ago and came to its crisis last night when Mrs. Sarah Schwartz was declared "dead," funeral candles were lit and a dirge was sung in Laconia court, which is Moonshine Alley.

Mrs. Schwartz, who lives at No. 23 Laconia court, declared that she would secure a warrant for sixteen-year-old Lena Barrisano on the charge of defacing property. With equal vigor the Barrisanos maintain that they will have Mrs. Schwartz

TRAFFIC OFFICER DRUNK ON DUTY

One From Back Bay Station and 2 From Dudley Street Also Discharged

As a result of the findings of trial boards, four patrolmen have been dropped from the Boston police department.

Albert F. Swett, a traffic officer for more than two years, and one of the best known traffic policemen in the city, was discharged for conduct unbecoming an officer. Swett was found to have been drunk on duty.

William Smith of the Back Bay station, also a patrolman for more than two years, was discharged for neglect of duty.

Patrolmen Patrick Cavanaugh and Peter L. Flynn of the Dudley street station were dropped for conduct unbecoming an officer and for neglect of duty.

The charges against Cavanaugh and Flynn were preferred by J. Rosenfeld of Lynn and Hyman Ehrenberg of Brighton. Twenty-one witnesses were heard at the hearing held before Captains Harriman, Rooney and Driscoll.

Witnesses testified that Patrolman Cavanaugh and a civilian were intoxicated and causing a disturb-

MISSING WINTHROP MEN AT BOSTON LIGHT

Fears for the safety of four men missing off Boston Light on a fishing trip Sunday were allayed today when friends of the men received word that they were safe at the light. The men were all employed at the Westinghouse Electric Company and were members of the Winthrop Yacht Club. They were: Harry Burroughs, Dewight Gibbs, A. Paige and Marcus Hallenback. Their boat became disabled and the party was rescued by fishermen.

GIRL AUTOIST IS FINED IN LYNN

Miss Ethel Christie of Yonkers, N. Y., a designer, was fined $100 in Lynn Court today, after being arrested for recklessly operating an automobile and speeding. Her arrest followed a collision between her machine and a car owned and operated by Daniel M. Radford of Lincoln avenue, Saugus. The collision occurred on Western avenue, Lynn, as Radford had completed a three-quarter turn. Speeding around the corner at a rate of thirty-five miles an hour, Miss Christie's automobile shot over to the left, hit the other car and wrecked it. Three women in the Radford car escaped injury. Witnesses say Miss Christie had lost control of her machine before she turned the corner.

After her arrest Miss Christie at first appealed her case, but at the arrival of a man friend who paid the $100 fine, she left the court.

WEATHERMAN TURNS ON HEAT

Jack Frost's attempt to break out in the middle of Summer was nipped today when the weather man officially announced that the temperature was rising and that tomorrow it would be about 70 or 80. However, Jack established a record before retiring. This morning the temperature was the lowest in 24 years with 54. Back in August 21, 1897, the thermometer registered 53.

Eastport, Maine, was the coldest place in the East with 54, while Boston was the warmest with 62.

The official forecast is: Fair tonight and Tuesday, with rising temperature. Fresh northwest winds, variable and diminishing.

Saranac Lake, N. Y., Aug. 21.—This section of the Adirondacks has just passed through the coldest August weather on record. Snow was reported to have fallen at night at some place in the mountains. There was a frost in the lowlands but crops were not seriously damaged.

AMERICAN GLIDER FINISHES SEVENTH

Paris, Aug. 21.—The superiority of the Germans in "gliding"—flying motorless airplanes—is emphasized by the results of the international contests at Clermont Ferrand. The great accomplishment was that of a German biplane, which in the two weeks' flying was in the air a total of 43 minutes, 59 seconds. Edmund Allen, the American entry, was given seventh place. His flights totalled 32 minutes, 27 seconds, before his machine was put out of competition by accident. In gliding tests at Gersfeld, Ger., last Saturday, Herr Montens, a student of the Hanover Technical School, kept a machine in the air 2 hours, 10 seconds on a single flight, breaking all records.

SEND FISH TO FIGHT PALESTINE DISEASE

New York, Aug. 21.—Two dozen plain, ordinary fish, personally conscripted by James N. Rosenberg, acting chairman of the Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, from the shallow waters of Jamaica Bay, adjacent to the Rockaways, are being conveyed in sealed containers to Palestine to fight—and feed on infectious mosquitoes.

COUNTESS SAYS SHE ISN'T A PAUPER

New York, Aug. 21. (By International News Service).—The countess Berengere P. de Boelleres, of French nobility ,who has been detained at Ellis Island, went before a special immigration board of inquiry today and denied that she was likely to become a public charge.

In addition to $200 on her person, the countess had $1,000 on deposit with the American Express Company and also a larger amount at her d sposal in care of a New York law firm.

Miss Alice eynolds ,of Brookline, Mass., a friend of the countess, corroborated the latter's testimony. The countess, who is a cousin of Alphonse de Richelieu, a descendant of Cardinal Richelieu, was asked if she was to marry William Grant, of Brookline, as reported. She replied: "My divorce is certain. My marriage problematical."

SALEM C. L. U. TO SUPPORT GASTON

The Salem Central Labor Union has voted to support the candidacy of Colonel Gaston for United States Senator and condemned Senator Lodge.

She came to Boston for a two weeks' vacation.

Then he came.

Then she found two weeks was not time enough.

So reads the romance and engagement of Miss Betty Smith of Willesbarre, Pa., and John J. Strock, No. 3 Esmond street, Dorchester, which culminated in their secret marriage in New York last month.

STARTED IN DECEMBER.

Miss Smith came to Boston last December to visit her sister, Mrs. Bernard Alberts of No. 99 Esmond street, Dorchester.

Then Strock appeared in the picture and stayed in it until the clergyman staged the final scene in New York.

Miss Smith is nineteen and young Strock is but twenty-three, and both found parental objections urged strenuously against their marriage.

But Betty's sister, Mrs. Alberts, played the obliging and charming role of fairy godmother, and took the "children" to New York without fuss for a short trip.

KEPT IT SECRET.

What could be easier?

Of course, they were married there, and returned to Boston lest the news leak out to their parents.

Today they are leaving for New York, from which port they will sail for an extended honeymoon tour of the tropics.

Councillor Ford will open his outdoor campaign tonight, Monday, August 21, at 8:30 p. m., at the corner of D street and Broadway, South Boston. He will speak in various other places throughout Suffolk County.

GIRL AND YOUTH TAKEN IN RAID TO BE MARRIED

Thomas Lyman Evans, Jr., and Corinne C. Cayouette, who were arrested in a Norway street raid last week, took out marriage intentions at City Hall Annex today.

The case against the couple in the Roxbury Court was postponed when they told Judge Hayden that they intended to be married immediately.

Evans gave his age as twenty-two years and his occupation as floorman in a broker's office. He said he was born in Biddeford, Me. He gave the same address as the girl, No. 103 Norway street, Back Bay.

Miss Cayouette said she was eighteen years old, born in Caribou, Me., and that her parents were both born in that State, as were Evans'. Last week she indignantly denied to a Boston American reporter that she was a simple country girl lured to a big city.

The young woman said she was more accustomed to big cities than the average girl, having visited Paris and traveled on the Continent. Evans admitted the girl was in his room when the police came in, but said there was nothing wrong.

COHASSET HOME OF WHITNEY IS ROBBED OF GEMS

Cohasset, Aug. 21.—A burglar entered the Summer home of Hammond Whitney in this town last night, and after boldly prowling from room to room escaped with a valuable assortment of jewelry.

The marauder gained entrance by climbing to a porch and entering an open window in the room of a maid who is reported to have discovered his presence as he was leaving. She gave the alarm after first having covered her head with the bed clothing.

Chief of Police Bates is working on the case. Members of the household refused to discuss the break, saying that they preferred to keep the facts secret pending an investigation.

4 GLOUCESTER MEN FINED $2,000 IN N. Y.

New York, Aug. 21.—Four officers of Gloucester, Mass., fishing schooners pleaded guilty in packing their schooners with liquor instead of fish, and were fined $500 each by Federal Judge Holmes today. The men were arrested and their boats seized in June when they speeded by the Fulton market fish docks and headed down stream. The men were George Murray and Peter Carochio of the schooner Peter Metzger, Alfred Anderson of the 936 C and Joseph Frank of the Stella.

First Transfusion of Blood to Save a Baby Success

Watertown, N. Y., Aug. 21.—The first case on record where blood was transfused into the veins of a new-born infant, was disclosed here today. The child is the infant son of Professor W. E. Hewitt of the Watertown High School.

It was born in a weakened condition and was failing rapidly when doctors decided on a transfusion as a last resort.

Four ounces of blood was taken from the veins of the father. The operation was successful.

THREE FIREMEN INJURED AT QUINCY BLAZE

Three firemen were injured and damage estimated at $8,000 caused by a fire of undetermined origin that practically destroyed the home of Joseph Cutler, No. 65 School street, Quincy, today.

The injured fire fighters were Lieutenant John Townend, cut over right eye; Richard Joyce, cut on right foot, and Louis Delaluca, cut by flying glass. They were treated at police headquarters.

The Cutler house was built by the late Patrick McDonald, pioneer granite manufacturer of Quincy, and was one of the show places of that section.

The blaze was discovered by Patrolman Shea, during the absence of the family at the store. Three alarms were sounded. The fire started in a room on the second floor over the kitchen and burned through the house.

Mr. Cutler visited the house for a short time Sunday afternoon, but did not go upstairs. At that time there was no sign of discord. Chief of Police Goodhue is investigating story. Mrs. Edwards did not speak to her husband in court.

WANTED WEDDING RING.

She told Judge Duff that Edwards had not contributed anything towards the support of the house, although she herself had worked to maintain a home.

"He is so mean, your honor," she declared, "that he even asked me to give him back the wedding ring. But I'm going to keep the ring, and when I get my divorce I will have it framed as an object lesson."

Edwards claimed that his wife nagged him by telling him what a wonderful man her first husband, Thomas Sullivan, was.

"Daisy was divorced from Sullivan in December, and we were married in January. It was all right during the honeymoon but after that she began to nag," declared Edwards.

"Every time we had an argument she'd tell me what a wonderful man Sullivan was. He must have been a wise guy at that—he got a divorce."

Accompanied by three police officers, Mrs. Edwards went to Barlow's apartment. She climbed a fire escape and, entering a rear window, confronted her husband, Barlow and the two other women. The women rushed out and into the arms of waiting officers.

Mrs. Edwards said she discovered the "party" by hearing her husband and the women singing the latest popular airs.

Mrs Edwards said:

"It was a pipe. I caught my first husband the same way I caught this one—with the goods. I'll get my first divorce on grounds of infidelity and I'm going to get my second divorce the same way. After that—no more men. I'm through. I don't believe there's a man alive who can be true to one woman.

"The two women I found with my husband and his bachelor friend are married.

SHE'S NOT JEALOUS.

"I don't feel the slightest bit jealous. Far be it. As far as I'm concerned, my husband can keep a harem. All I want is my freedom. I made the mistake of my life in marrying him—the second mistake of my life. My father warned me against him, but I thought I knew more than he did.

"I married him in haste, and it wasn't two days before I began to repent at leisure. The world is full of his sort of husband. That's why the courts are overworked.

"I got what I deserved, I suppose me. Now I'm convinced, convince me. Now I'm convinced. I'm through with men. I don't see how Eden could have been a paradise with Adam hanging around. I guess maybe it was because there were no other women."

COLLINS LEADS NEW ATTACK ON REBELS

Dublin, Aug. 21 (By International News Service).—With Michael Collins personally directing the movements of the Free State forces, important new advances were driven into the rebel front.

Michael Collins

The Irregulars apparently have been disheartened by the absence of Eamon deValera, their commander-in-chief, and are falling back all along the line. The greatest trouble is caused the Free Staters by small guerilla bands of Irregulars.

Collins has made light of the attempt to assassinate him when his motor car was fired upon from ambush. Collins was not in the car at the time but the attackers did not know this and riddled the machine with bullets.

One Free State army officer was killed and three others wounded when irregulars ambushed a military motor at Blessington.

Eleven irregulars were captured here when Free Staters raided a house. In addition to the prisoners, the Free Staters seized a quanity of munitions and engineering equipment.

Report De Valera Shot Through the Throat

By Universal Service.

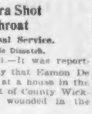
Special Cable Dispatch.

London, Aug. 21.—It was reported in Dublin today that Eamon De Valera is staying at a house in the Greystones district of County Wicklow, dangerously wounded in the throat.

He is said to have escaped from the Northern area after having been wounded some days ago.

The second attempt within a few months to assassinate Michael Collins failed. The Commander - in - Chief escaped with his life to a lucky incident.

Collins went in an automobile in the direction of Greystones, in County Wicklow. The machine broke down on route, Collins returning to Dublin in another car.



Eamon DeValera

A group of Irregulars, unaware of the change in Collins' plan, waited in Stillergan to attack his party on their return.

The broken-down car was being towed back on Friday and was rounding a sharp corner when a fusillade of bullets riddled it, while a bomb exploded beneath the engine.

Irish Rebels Burns Home of Wilson's Uncle

Belfast, Aug. 21.—Republican irregulars today raided and burned the home of Mackay Wilson, uncle of the late Field Marshal Sir Henry Hughes Wilson, former chief of the British Imperial general staff. The residence, which was in County Longford, has been vacant since the first of the year. Valuable family records and mementoes of the past were destroyed.

want to be judged yourself in this way, as the War Department is trying to judge this major," Attorney Flaherty told the board sitting in the case.

The personnel of the board of inquiry is Colonel Archibald Campbell, Colonel J. B. Christian, Colonel H. R. Lemly and Colonel M. G. Spinks.

Major Edward A. Stockton, Jr., acting as recorder, said it was while he was reading the records that Attorney Flaherty interposed his objection.

Major Nicholson, it is understood, is desirous of being assigned to the Walter Reed Hospital that he may undergo treatment for ear. While at Camp Dix, he was shot in the ear, and has lost all hearing in one ear. It is also understood that Major Nicholson would accept assignment to the hospital, with retirement from the service following his completion of medical treatment.

INDIA SEETHING, SAY RETURNED TRAVELERS

Travelers, missionaries and business men returning to the country from India on the City Line steamship City of Lahore, in port today from Calcutta, united in declaring that India is in a state of ferment. Strikes, riots, resistance to authority and various other forms of disorder are increasing. The troubles of the country, they said, were due to "Ghandi-ism," and the fact that Ghandi is in jail only makes it worse.

Miss Mary Esther Gooch, a teacher in one of the Methodist mission schools in Central India, said that Ghandi-ism is cutting down the attendance of both the native and mission schools from 30 to 50 per cent. "India is a different country, deprivants who formerly kowtowed and chanmed are not even civil to their employers now.

"Of all the rot that has been written about Ghandi, that by Pussyfoot Johnson in the Christian Register was the worst. Johnson spent a few hours in a few cities in India, speaks none of the native tongues, comes back here and says Ghandi is 'sent of God.' Which is not only bad English, but untrue.

arrested for base and [illegible] marks about pretty Lena. Neither of the threats have yet [illegible] to the attention of the authorities.

Last night Mrs. Schwartz was awakened by a doleful chant outside her windows. She looked out and on the Barrisano steps candles were arranged in funeral style, while children sang:

"Jennie Schwartz is dead and gone,
There's a funeral in our alley."

And on Mrs. Schwartz's own steps she found great smears of sombre black, made either with ink or black paint.

Mrs. Schwartz said today that Lena had arranged the cotillions, and she likewise affirmed that the girl had smeared the black smudges on the Schwartz domicile. She called on Dominic Nicholas, a neighbor, as witness.

But Lena Barrisano, aided by her father, two brothers, two cousins and her mother, told a very different story.

"It all began two years ago," said the vivacious Lena, her eyes sparking with indignation or amusement or something. Sarah Schwartz had a little boy there and he used to throw the garbage on our side. We made him stop it and she got sore.

"Then two weeks ago we sold our property here. She got sore again. Probably she wanted to sell her own house to the party that bought ours. Then she said she would buy five pounds of candle to use for my mother's death.

"So I got a few candles myself and put them out on our doorstep, not on hers. I don't see how we how we could stop the kids from singing whatever they wanted to. But I did not put the stuff on her steps.

"She has raised a lot of trouble in the neighborhood, but she can't get away with the remarks she has made about me. We are going to have her arrested."

FOSTER OFFICE RAID SHOWS RAIL CLEWS

Chicago, Aug. 21.—Examination of papers seized in a raid on the offices of the Trades Union Educational League, headed by William Z. Foster, lured a "one big union" propaganda among railroad workers.

It also gave information concerning a series of radical meetings in railroad centres, according to State's Attorney Crowe.

Foster, who led the last steel strike, was recently driven out of Colorado.

No arrests were made, but a long list of names of radical leaders was unearthed, Mr. Crowe announced.

The State's Attorney's investigation began after receipt of the report of the Michigan Central wreck at Gary, Ind., in which two men were killed and two injured, and the discovery of two sticks of dynamite on the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks.

RAILS WERE LOOSENED.

Foster was said to be in Joliet, Ill., where it was reported he spent several days after he was ordered out of Colorado.

Railroad officials said the Michigan Central express train had been deliberately ditched by plotters. Spikes were removed from ties and rails loosened, they said.

It was said on Foster's headquarters was planned after hurried communications with authorities in other rail centers, where disorders have occurred and where meetings of railroad men have been addressed by radical leaders.

Reports of a dozen meetings addressed by Foster in cities of the Middle West were received, the State's attorney said.

Detectives battered down the door of the league's offices. They seized a truck, 75 boxes of books, pamphlets and pictures of Lenine and Trotsky. The evidence filled the truck. Twenty-four complete list of meetings held by Foster.

Even here, it was said, Foster went to Detroit, where Sheriff Dewkirk was wounded and two men killed in a rail strike riot two weeks ago.

Detectives questioned numerous strikers today in the search for the man who threw a bomb at workers now.

"Of all the rot that has been written about Ghandi, that by Pussyfoot Johnson in the Christian Register was the worst. Johnson spent a few hours in a few cities in India, speaks none of the native tongues, comes back here and says Ghandi is 'sent of God.' Which is not only bad English, but untrue.

Declares I. W. W. Eager to Take Over Trains

Chicago, Aug. 21.—Many members of the Industrial Workers of the World are numbered among the railroad strikers. A number of them have demonstrated their objection to military despotism by quitting their jobs," according to a statement of Martin Carlson, general secretary of the Railroad Workers' Industrial Union, a part of the I. W. W., according to announcement by the general defense committee today.

Carlson was quoted as saying the I. W. W. was "willing and eager" to take over "all responsibility for railroad transportation and for the conduct of all other productive industries." He denied, however, the organization sought control of the reins of government.

ACADEMY SUES OVER THEOLOGICAL SCHOOL

A bill in equity against the trustees of the Andover Theological Seminary, the president and Fellows of Harvard University and Attorney-General J. Weston Allen, was brought in the Supreme Court today by The Visitors of the Theological Institute in Phillips Academy, Andover.

The petitioners ask for an injunction to restrain the defendants from carrying into effect an agreement and proposal between the Andover Theological Seminary and Harvard University for a closer affiliation between them, and from forming a non - denominational theological school to be known as the Theological School of Harvard University.

SUES FOR LOSS OF HUSBAND'S LOVE AFTER HE GOES TO GRAVE

WIDOW IS SEEKING $20,000

Says Her Mate's Property Was Left to Woman in Lowell

Lowell, Aug. 21.—Claiming that she and her children were abandoned in England by her husband, now dead, Mrs. Ann Windsor has brought suit for $20,000 against Mrs. Christine M. Whittier of this city, charging alienation of Windsor's affections.

Windsor died in 1920, after transferring much real estate to Mrs. Whittier, and making a will in her favor. Among the legacies left the Lowell woman were a number of shares of stock in H. V. Greene's enterprises. Mrs. Whittier is one of those now suing the Greene companies.

According to Farley & Tierney, counsel for Mrs. Windsor, Windsor came to this country some years ago, leaving his wife and several children in England. He first went to New Bedford, and later came to this city.

He was employed in the mills here and made considerable money, it is claimed. During this time he became friendly with Mrs. Whittier, it is alleged, and transferred some real estate he had bought to her.

After his death his wife came here and then learned for the first time of his friendship for Mrs. Whittier. She also learned that her husband had made a will leaving everything to the Lowell woman.

An attachment for $20,000 was served on Mrs. Whittier, as the latter was starting on a trip to Canada, it is claimed.

ONLY 10 RESPOND TO PAWTUCKET CUT

Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 21.—Pickets who went on duty today at the plant of the Acme Finishing Company said that less than a dozen workers appeared at the mill today, when a 10 per cent. wage cut and a 54-hour weekly working schedule became effective. The company normally employs 200 workers. Officials of the Lonsdale Company asserted today that about 130 persons were now employed at the plant. At the Lidnoln Bleachery it was said that applicants for work were being turned away.

KLAN INVADES CHURCH AND LEAVES $1,200

Chicago, Aug. 21.—As the Rev. Johnson Myers, pastor of Immanuel Baptist Church explained to his congregation that more money must be contributed if much needed repairs to the church were to be made, a knock sounded at the door and more than a dozen figures, masked and robed in the garb of the Ku Klux Klan marched into the room. They halted at the altar.

At a signal a line of 500 men filed through, each depositing a contribution. The Rev. Mr. Myers counted $1,200.

Omigosh, Marc McDermott Tells Flapper the Movies Make One's Face Ache

PASTE THESE ON YOUR MIRROR

If you wants look like grief or joy or anythin, just look this way as per above. You can look like any kinda bird you wants. Ain't movie actors grand?

This Looking Like So Many Different Birds Is Tough, Says Hero With Pompadour

By THE FLAPPER

"Yes," remarked McDermott, running his polished finger nails through his two-story pompadour, "everything is in the face.

"You may," he went on, after allowing that to sink in, "have talent, personality, brains and what-not, but if you haven't the face, where are you!"

"No place," I admitted.

There was no doubting it, Marc was right. We were talking about crashing into the movies, and Marc, who has been in the movies ever since they started to move, was wearing out shoes in the chasing pictures when Gloria Swanson was in rompers, and who has been going strong all that time, was saying a face-full about his chosen art.

"Now, take me, Frinstance," Marc remitted.

"If I didn't watch my exercises, my face would probably freeze right back to where it was when I started."

Registers Surprise

"Exercises!" I exclaimed, registering surprise tempered with interest.

"What has athletics to do with facial expression?"

"Everything," declared Marc. "There you have it. I couldn't have put it better myself."

"That's what one must be in the cinema, a facial athlete. And I tell you, sometimes it gets just too awfully hard."

"What? Makin' faces?" I asked.

"Yes," sighed Marc. "Now you take a banker. Well, he's got an easy job. If you know what I mean. All he has to do is to get up in the morning, set his face in a million dollar expression, and hold it all day. Or a prize fighter. All he has to do is long tough. Or a preacher. He puts on his sanctimonious face when he's shaving in the morning and there's an end to it.

"But me, omigosh. I hafta be all of those birds one right after another. Is it any wonder my face aches? Sometimes I think, 'Oh, just to look blank for one day and give the old man a rest!' But, no. Honestly, if I didn't spend fifteen minutes a day practicing my expressions in the mirror my face'd end then "Indigestion." By the time we were trying out "Merriment" Marc had fully warmed up.

It was "Grief" that brought the police officer tearing up to the stage entrance of Keith's to see if there was anything he could do for Marc.

And as for "defiance"—but look at the pictures.

MISSIONARY TALKS TO 50,000 BY RADIO

"The Ladder of Hope" was heard by 50,000 listeners-in when Rev. Fletcher D. Parker, city missionary, gave the first of a series of broadcast sermons at Medford Hillside Radio Station, as representative of the Greater Boston Federation of Churches.

Mr. Parker's "Ladder of Hope" consisted of many ladders upon which he maintained the American people are rising to higher civilization. Among these he mentioned the public library, the public schools, and the American home. While these three institutions flourish, he said, the country fears no disaster.

RAIL STRIKE HITS CATTLE EXHIBITS

In the hope of overcoming the handicap of the railroad strike, which has prevented the shipment of some of the country's prize herds of "show" cows, the State Department of Agriculture was busy today assembling some exhibits of its own for display at the county fairs. The State Agricultural College will send its best herds into the competition at the Springfield Fair, from September 17 to 23, and the State will have at least fifteen master exhibits including vegetable, fruit, bird and plant-pest control displays.

4,000 WOMEN BACK IN LYNN SHOE SHOPS

Four thousand women members of Stitchers' Local No. 57 of the United Shoe Workers of America, who for two weeks have been on strike in protest against manufacturers' failure to pay them back pay for new styles, returned to work today after receiving assurances that the Lynn Manufacturers' Association would take up the question of back pay in a few days.

The settlement was brought about through efforts of the Mayor's arbitration which satisfactorily adjusted the cutters' strike of last week.

SUICIDES BARE ROMANCE OF "APHRODITE"

New York, Aug. 21.—Hastening home from Paris is the mother of Vera Lehmann, the beautiful young dancer of "Aphrodite," who died of an overdose of veronal last Monday.

Twelve hours after the young woman's death Louis Koemmenich, musical composer and orchestra leader, committed suicide by gas in his apartment at No. 257 West Ninety-first street.

A penciled note left by the musician, who had been director of the Aphrodite production for two seasons, laid bare the reason for his deed. The note read:

"Just received word that Vera committed suicide. This being a great loss to me, there is nothing else for me to do."

COMPOSER WED 36 YEARS.

Koemmenich was fifty-five years old. He had been married thirty-six years, and he had a son and two daughters, one of whom is married. The dancer, whose name on the stage was Vera d'Arielle, was twenty-two.

The girl was well-to-do and talented. She spoke several languages and showed much vocal promise. She took the fatal draught of veronal in her mother's costume shop at No. 249 West Forty-second street a week ago Friday and was taken to Flower Hospital.

In 1912 Koemmenich succeeded Frank Damrosch as conductor of the Oratorio Society. When the war came Koemmenich did not conceal that his sympathies were with the Fatherland. He soon found himself without funds or work.

Going out on the road with an "Aphrodite" company as director did not serve to arouse the old musician from his dejection, but one day Mrs. Koemmenich received a letter telling of a beautiful dancing girl in the company in whom he was much interested.

FAMILY RECALLS FLAMES.

Last March Koemmenich attempted suicide by swallowing veronal, he wife said. She added:

"They saw much of each other after that. I saw it was useless to try to end the affair. My husband and I had been married thirty-six years and I hoped his reason would return to him."

Then the dancer had a talk with Koemmenich's daughter. Miss Koemmenich said today she did not upbraid Vera—she merely pointed out her father was fifty-five and she was twenty-two.

It was just two days after that the girl took poison.

LIQUOR TESTS SHOW GAIN IN BOOTLEGGING

The extent to which the home-brewing and making of illegal liquors has increased in this State was indicated today when Chief Herman C. Lythgoe of the State Division of Food and Drugs announced that 2,632 samples of unlawful hooch have been sent to him for analysis so far this year, as compared with 3,431 samples for the entire year 1921. Lythgoe estimated that 5,000 samples will come to him from the police by January 1.

Lythgoe said the increased activity of the police in raiding suspected places is partly responsible for the deluge of samples that has poured in upon him. Some towns he had suspected of not having heard of the prohibition laws are now sending in their samples for analysis.

Lythgoe said also that many home-brewers have turned their energy from beers and wines to distilled liquor, experience having taught them that the penalty for being caught with the heavy alcohols is the same. Whiskey also occupies less space and brings greater prices.

Fusel oil, aldehydes, volatile acids and other poisonous matter are usually found in the whiskey samples, he said. Most of the whiskey is unaged. The alcoholic content varies from 36 to 49 per cent., which was the usual run in the whiskey sold across the counter in pre-prohibition days.

SUNDAY BALL CASE AT ANSONIA FIZZLES

Ansonia, Ct., Aug. 21.—The case against Mayor John C. Mead of this city, charged with violating the Sunday law in permitting an exhibition baseball game to be played here on August 6 between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Ansonia Elks, was noted in City Court today by Judge R. L. Munger. Prosecuting Attorney McDermond told the court that he had been unable to find any witnesses who were willing to testify that they had paid admission.

The Right to Strike

To the Public:

There can be no wise and permanent settlement of the existing railroad strike without the backing of a correctly informed public opinion. What, then, is the real issue of the strike?

In a statement issued in Washington Monday, August 14th, Mr. L. E. Sheppard, President of the Order of Railway Conductors, said in part, as quoted in press dispatches:

> "The real issue is the status of the men on strike. We hold that they are not dismissed from the service; that they have not resigned by striking and all their rights as employes are only suspended, so to speak, contingent on whether they go back into the service. This applies to the right to strike, under the law, to pensions provided by their employers as well as to seniority. That is the real issue."

It is submitted that the ground taken by the strikers is justified neither in morals or law, that it would be vicious in practice and contrary to the public interest.

Not Justified in Law

The strikers do not deny the jurisdiction of the Labor Board and the Board itself at the time of the threatened strike last fall, declared on October 29, 1921, in a formal decision (No. 299) in the Ann Arbor Railroad et al case:

> "The Board further points out for the consideration of the employes interested that when such action does result in a strike the organization so acting has forfeited its rights and the rights of its members in and to the provisions and benefits of all contracts theretofore existing, and the employes so striking, have voluntarily removed themselves from the classes entitled to appeal to this board for relief and protection."

It follows from this that on July 1st of this year no carrier legally had any shop-craft employes except those that remained in its service. As new men were taken on, and accorded, under the resolution of the Labor Board of July 3rd, the benefits of "the outstanding wage and rule decision of the Board," they were entitled to have their names entered in the order of their employment immediately under the names of the loyal employes who remained at work.

The striking employes, under the terms of the Board's decision, ceased to be railroad employes, and this is the position which they themselves took in denying the Board's jurisdiction.

The general law in such cases is well stated in "Martin on Labor Unions," in the following terms:

> "When employes strike the relation of master and servant is terminated absolutely—as much so as it could be by any act of the employer. The employer cannot thereafter be compelled to employ any of them, by any law, by any order of court, or under any conditions. Whatever difference of opinion there may be as to the propriety of other men taking the places of those on strikes, yet under the law this right is clear and undisputed and there never was a decision to the contrary."

The Morals of the case

The moral aspects of the case could not be better stated than in the following words of the New York Herald:

> "There is one thing that the American public never could be convinced the railroad executives have the right or the freedom to do. This is to throw out either the old men that did not desert their posts when ordered to walk out by the strike leaders or the new men that came to take the place of the strikers.
> "The railroad executives are not free to make this sacrifice of their men, old or new, now on the job. They are bound morally, bound in a degree that should be of even stronger binding force than a legal contract, not to throw out those men."

The future Effect on the Public Service

If strikes may be entered into with impunity and without risk or loss by the strikers; if there is to be no reward for loyal service, it will be extremely difficult, if not impossible, to induce any employes to remain at work, or to hire new men, in case of future strikes. It would, in fact, put a premium upon striking and a penalty upon loyalty.

The real issue is not the status of the men on strike, but whether industrial disputes shall be settled by force, by threats of force, or by orderly process.

FEAR 3 LOST ON MISSING SEAPLANE

New York, Aug. 21 (By International News Service).—Ships, seaplanes and wireless were all utilized today in a search for a missing flying boat of the Aeromarine Company, which vanished during a flight with an out-of-town passenger, from Eighty-first street to Fire Island and return.

Major D. L. Smith, manager of the Aeromarine airways, was in charge of the search. The mother ship of the seaplanes, a converted sub-chaser, accompanied by the Nina, a fourteen-passenger flying boat, and the Ritzcraft, a amphibian machine, searched the waters about Fire Island.

The missing seaplane left Eighty-first street at 7 o'clock Sunday morning. It was to have circled the island and then returned.

The passenger, who is said to have been a visitor in New York, did not give his name. He arrived at the anchorage while the plane was being tuned up.

The plane was last seen from the Battery, passing out over the bay. It was not equipped with wireless.

The plane was in charge of Pilot W. P. Miller, a former navy flyer, and Harold Thompson, the mechanician.

DIVORCE PAPERS SERVED

Mrs. Grace Walker Says Accused Minister Is Getting His Just Retribution

Portland, Me., Aug. 21.—Mrs. Grace Pilling Walker, wife of the Rev. Joseph Walker of Windsor, Mass., declared that she would gladly give up her husband so that he might marry Evelyn Goodell and give her child a name.

She further expressed pleasure at the thought of being separated from the minister, and stated that if there is such a thing as retribution the Rev. Walker is surrounded by it.

Mrs. Walker, who has been served with divorce papers charging desertion, added that her husband's defense in the Goodell case, based on physiological lines, is "disgusting."

"For the question of age and physical virility to be dragged in when the question of paternity is the issue," said Mrs. Walker, "is, as I say, not only disgusting, but foolish. When my suit is heard against Mr. Walker there will be something said on this question—but not till then."

RETRIBUTION, SAYS WIFE.

The woman, who was located at No. 1300A Congress street, this city, talked freely about her husband's troubles. She seemed to feel that her own unhappy married life had received the attention of a just fate.

"If there is such a thing as retribution," she said, "it seems to have cropped up in the trouble in which Mr. Walker now finds himself. My treatment at the hands of Mr. Walker was not such that I can fully to his defence. Just two weeks ago I was served with papers in a divorce suit brought by him, in which I was charged with desertion —and now Providence or something else has interposed and punished him.

"Originally it was my intention not to contest the divorce proceedings, but with the Goodell charges hanging over his head, I shall fight his plea of desertion, and when the case comes up for a hearing the first week in September I will tell my story, and it will not be a pleasant story. No, indeed, the story of my life with the Rev. Walker will not be pleasant—but it will be most interesting, especially to Mr. Walker and his family.

DEACON VERY FRIENDLY.

"As to the rupture between the Goodell family and Mr. Walker I know nothing except what I have read in the papers. But during the time I was in Windsor, Deacon Goodell and Mr. Walker were very friendly. He was constantly visiting the Goodell home. The girl Evelyn was a member of the Sunday school class.

"Willingly, gladly will I grant Mr. Walker a divorce, so that he may right the wrong done the girl, who, claims he is the father of her baby. If what Evelyn Goodell says is true there will be no one more willing than myself to release him from marriage."

Arrest Police Chief in Clash With Federal Men

Corbin, Ky., Aug. 21.—Friction between local and Federal officials in this strike-tense town resulted today in the arrest of Chief of Police John Manning, City Patrolman William Patterson and two deputy sheriffs, W. H. Baker and J. B. Sutton. They were charged with interfering with Federal officers.

GIRL IS FOUND UNCONSCIOUS IN STREET

Police of Lexington and Woburn are investigating mysterious circumstances surrounding an automobile accident on Lexington street; in which Miss Betty S. Smith of Woburn was seriously injured today.

When found the girl was unconscious by the side of the wrecked automobile. The driver of the car, Byron Russell of Massachusetts avenue, Lexington, was nowhere to be seen.

Betty S. Smith

The girl was rushed to the Choate Hospital, Woburn, where she is in a serious condition. She recovered consciousness for a few moments and said Russell and P. A. Kanessa were with her in the auto. What happened she did not remember.

Russell was at his home when called by a reporter. He stated that he had been out driving with the girl and that the left front wheel of the auto dropped off on Lexington street, near the Woburn line, as he was taking the girl home.

"After the smash," said Russell, "I remembered nothing until I found myself at the Arlington hospital with a badly injured leg. How I got there or what happened to the girl I do not know. I do not know who brought me or why they did not bring the girl along. The smash was the last I knew."

When the police were called to the scene Russell had disappeared. Why the girl was not taken along is a mystery police are trying to solve.

Plan Pole Trips in New Yankee Dirigible

Chicago, Aug. 21.—Battleships have not been rendered obsolete by the building of bombing planes, but the ships must be built differently in the future, Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the division of aeronautics of the United States Navy, said in an address at the pageant of progress.

A trustworthy airplane in the hands of a skilful pilot, he declared, is safer than an automobile. He asserted that a dirigible is being built near Philadelphia that will be larger than the one destroyed in England a few months ago.

A transcontinental flight and flights to the North and South Poles and around the world are being planned, he said.

HOUSE IS BLOWN UP, MAN DEAD; 4 HUNTED

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 21.—A two-story brick dwelling on Pennsylvania avenue here, is a heap of smoking ruins, following a terrific explosion early today.

Adjoining structures were wrecked by the blast. Flames which shot thirty feet into the air, completed the wreck left undone by the explosion. Debris was scattered about the street for a distance of 100 feet.

A charred body identified as that of Salvator Burcherieri was taken from the ruins. It is believed he was alone at the time. Burcherieri is believed to have been slain. Four men fled in an auto shortly before the explosion.

Fine for Skin Exposed to Sun or Flying Dirt

Mercolized Wax as a Beautifier

These days the face needs special care and attention. Flying dust and dirt, the scalding sun, are sworn on any skin. Their despoiling effects are best overcome by the application of pure Mercolized Wax. (Dearborn Supply Co., Chicago). This keeps skin and pores in a cleanly condition, the complexion beautifully white and spotless. Reddened, tanned, freckled or roughened cuticle is actually absorbed by it. One ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, is sufficient to completely renovate a soiled complexion. It is used like cold cream, allowed to remain on over night, and washed off in the morning.

FRANCE TO MAKE GERMANY PAY

Paris, Aug. 21 (By International News Service).—Premier Poincare's speech at Bar-Le-Duc, in which he declared that France will find a way to make Germany pay for her war crimes, was enthusiastically received by the press today.

In attacking the British attitude, the Premier said: "It seems that, little by little, France is denied almost the right to have a French policy at all."

NOW, WATSON, USE YOUR BRAIN ON THIS

Lynn, Aug. 21.—When Arthur Blouin was arrested on a charge of speeding he remarked he had been drinking, according to Patrolman George Nihan.

The patrolman refused to believe this but finally, when Blouin insisted, he had the car driven to the police station and Blouin was forced to return home on a street car.

SEEKS WORK IN HUB, STARVES, COLLAPSES

Harry Kilnemen, fifty-six years old, of New York City, collapsed in a doorway at No. 219 Chelsea street, East Boston, and was taken to the East Boston Relief Hospital, where he was found to be suffering from starvation. He told physicians he had not eaten since last Thursday, and said he was penniless.

Chas. Markovitz

After he had recuperated slightly, he stated he had been out of work for months. He left his wife and children a couple of weeks ago, he said, to come to Boston to secure work, friends having told him work was plentiful here. He had been unable to find any, however, and was wandering the streets helplessly when he collapsed.

Mrs. Chas. Markovitz

Charles Markovitz of No. 161 Chelsea street heard of the man's plight and hurried to the hospital. He offered Kilneman a job, and said he would help him to rejoin his wife and family in New York.

100 MERMAIDS TRAINING FOR BIG SWIM

Nearly one hundred mermaids are entered for the one-mile swimming race which is to feature the Boston American's annual water carnival in Charles River Basin next Saturday afternoon.

Those enrolled include some of the finest swimmers from all parts of New England. Every indication points to the finest race since the American started the carnivals fourteen years ago.

The girls' swimming race will start at 3 o'clock. Persons desiring to watch their favorite sea queens glide through the water are advised to be on hand promptly, as every effort will be made to have the mermaids dive from the Union Boat Club float, West End, on time.

One of the big features of the carnival will be a special exhibition back-stroke race of 100 yards, in which Eddie Muir, New England champion, will attempt to break his own record. He will start from scratch.

A special 100-yard dash will be staged with Vernon Hartford swimming from scratch. He won the 50 and 100-yard New England championship last year. Among those who will compete against him Saturday will be John Goodhue, Edward Adonis and John Carnie.

Nineteen-year-old Ruth Norwood of New Bedford, who won second prize in the American's race last year and the year before, has entered for Saturday's event. Her numerous friends in the Whaling City expect her to land one of the prizes.

The practical nature of the prizes offered the five girls finishing first in the BIG SWIM has caused many to enter. The prizes are, first, large cedar "hope" chest; second, leather over-night or week-end case; third, good camera; fourth, fountain pen and pencil set; fifth, electric curling iron set.

Among the latest entries are the following:

Ruth Norwood, 19, No. 198 West Frenchavenue, New Bedford.
Ruth Mann, 17, No. 25 Market street, Cambridge.
Mildred Delaney, 18, No. 256 Windsor street, Cambridge.
Anna Drake, 22, No. 118 Columbia street, Cambridge.
Mary Kavigan, 21, No. 8 Fountain street, Roxbury.
Anna Reana, 21, No. 39 Sherman street, Roxbury.
Olive Morash, 20, No. 2 Lincoln street, Dorchester.
Nellie Robinson, 18, No. 9 Dudley street, Roxbury.
Ruth C. Reese, 22, No. 903 Parker street, Roxbury.
Gertrude Harnes, 26, Charlestown.
Jane E. Foley, 19, No. 1 Mason terrace, Jamaica Plain.
Mary Goldstein, 19, No. 64 Allen street, Dorchester.
Kathleen Sullivan, 16, No. 12 White place, Brookline.
Hula Burns, 16, No. 69 Beach street, Nashua, N. H.
Loretta Coen, 20, No. 28 Maple street, Waverley.
Ollie Bagnell, 15, No. 206 River street, Cambridge.
Stella Keneski, 16, No. 16 Willard street, Boston.
Helen Mate, 14, No. 111 Union Park street, Boston.

CHECK BABY; CAN GO ON VACATION

New York, Aug. 21.—Any mother in New York City in need of a vacation and who has children under nine years of age who make it impossible for her to leave the city is invited by the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies to check her offspring for a two-week period beginning August 28, with the federation's nursery. Children so checked will be taken to the Summer home of this organization at Oakhurst, New Jersey, where they will be given proper playground attention and medical supervision during the fortnight in the country.

TROOOPS TO QUELL BUDAPEST STRIKERS

London, Aug. 21 (By International News Service).—Serious labor troubles have broken out at Budapest and the government is massing troops in the city to put down an uprising, according to advices received from Vienna today by the Daily News. The Hungarian government fears a general strike. Forty thousand metal workers went out first and later were joined by building trades and flour mill employes.

ANNOUNCEMENT!

"SENIOR"

Georges

—"JUNIOR"

Coming Back Again to Boston!

—a bigger, more powerful, more successful clothing institution than ever, we shall reopen here early in October after an absence of nearly four years, at

45-47 Summer Street

GEORGES coming back to Boston!—this will be welcome news to thousands of our old patrons in this city. It was with keen regret that we disposed of our old store here, as well as those in other cities, nearly four years ago, and we did it only because the prices of clothing during the war soared to such unprecedented heights that we simply could not maintain our low-price policy and satisfy our customers.

Now that conditions are once more normal and that we are again able to give the public the values for which we have a nation-wide reputation, we are re-opening in Boston with a bigger, and more beautiful store than ever, with attractions for particular and economical clothes buyers second to none in all New England. The exact date of our opening will be announced later, after extensive alterations are completed.

Our "home-coming" will be celebrated with a real "old-fashioned" value-giving demonstration, that will bring our former customers and hundreds of new ones with a welcoming rush! We will present for the first time ever seen under one roof in Boston 40 nationally famous brands of clothes for men and young men! Wait! It will pay you handsomely to defer your Fall clothing purchases until we open.

The New GEORGES New England Chain of Stores

This is the first of a chain of GEORGES stores that we shall open throughout New England. New ones will be opened as rapidly as suitable locations and desirable leases are acquired. SEE PLOT IN POISON PEN LETTERS TO WRECK CANDLER ROMANCE

SLEUTHS HUNT SENDER

Atlanta Flooded With Epistles Defaming Mrs. Debouclelle, New Orleans Beauty

Atlanta, Aug. 21.—Atlanta has been flooded with poison letters, seeking to wreck the romance of Onezime Debouchelle of New Orleans.

The noted Southern beauty, daughter of one of Louisiana's oldest creole families, is soon to wed Asa G. Candler, former Mayor of Atlanta, capitalist, banker and one of the wealthiest men of the South, who has made a fortune out of Coca Cola. The poison letters, it is alleged, bear New Orleans postmarks.

The arrival of the letters in Atlanta has recently become known in New Orleans. It is said in some quarters that the flood of missives dates back to the blackballing of a candidate for membership in an exclusive New Orleans woman's club.

START PROBE

Recently, Judge J. H. Candler of Atlanta, brother of Asa G. Candler, made a trip to New Orleans and called on both friends and enemies of Onezime Debouchelle in the course of an exhaustive investigation of the source of the letters.

He found nothing to justify them, it is learned. He was told that Onezime Debouchelle was one of New Orleans's most charming and accomplished matrons, whose record of civic, suffrage and social activities had made her one of the leaders among the women of the city.

Nevertheless the poison letters continued, it is alleged, to bear the New Orleans postmark, and club and society women of New Orleans who know of the situation have become aroused.

It is learned that one friend of Mrs. Debouchelle in New Orleans has been empowered to retain attorneys regardless of expense and to take whatever action is deemed advisable. Up to the present no decision has been made as to what action will be taken, but a thorough investigation by private detectives had been started and, it is understood, has brought definite results.

The investigation made by members of the Candler family even included a visit by a private detective to the Norton lodgings at No. 2218 St. Charles avenue, where Mrs. Debouchelle took up her residence soon after closing her St. Charles avenue home.

HAS FINE REPUTATION.

There the investigator also was told that Mrs. Debouchelle was one of New Orleans most highly respected matrons whose activities, in addition to suffrage and social work, had largely to do with the welfare of orphans and visits to "shut-ins" about the city, many of them old women.

One of Mrs. Debouchelle's close friends in New Orleans, Mrs. Lydia Wickliffe, one of the prominent figures in national, State and city suffrage and civic work, said:

"When a woman has wealth she is subject to criticism, always by some of her sisters. When she is a beauty, such as is Onezime Debouchelle, she has to watch her step, and when she has, as Onezime has, and when she has, as Onezime DeBouchelle has, and always has had, wealth, beauty, brains, charm and accomplishments, she has to watch her step particularly against the poisoned tongues of envious women.

"I have known Onezime Debouchelle for years. No woman in New Orleans was more circumspect and careful than she. And for this there was, above all else, a fighting reason. She has been an ardent worker for suffrage from the first. Only the women who went through that fight will ever know of the bitter, slanderous things that were said of us by our political and personal opponents."

Three "Charmers"

WINSOME GIRL TYPES.

YOUNG WIDOWS ELIGIBLE IN CONTEST

"Here's to the maiden of bashful fifteen,
Here's to the widow of fifty,
Here's to the flaunting, extravagant queen
And here's to the housewife that's thrifty!"

All the women described in Sheridan's famous toast, with the exception of the elderly widow, are eligible in the Boston American's MOST CHARMING girl tournament. The widow is eligible provided she is not more than twenty-five years of age.

Which of the quartet will be declared most winsome by the judges? Will the honor fall to "the maiden of bashful 15," or will one of the others win the week's free trip to Atlantic City?

The Boston American is offering this free trip, with all expenses paid, to the girl between 14 and 25, residing in Boston or vicinity, selected by the judges as the MOST CHARMING young woman entered.

QUEST STILL ON.

Among the recent entrants is Isabel Antle, the clever 16-year-old Cambridge mermaid, who will also compete in the Boston American's big swimming race in Charles River Basin next Saturday afternoon. Miss Antle lives at No. 4 Densmore court and was nominated by her sister, Miss Edna, of the same address.

A winsome matron entered in the contest is Mrs. Margaret Skerry, 23 years old, of No. 550 Seventh street, South Boston. She is the mother of three lovely children.

Mrs. A. J. Norwood of No. 7 Harvard street, Dorchester, in nominating Lucille Dewing of No. 14 Oakland avenue, Auburndale, wrote, "I think she is a charming young girl."

The girl selected for the week's free trip beginning September 8, the first day of the Atlantic City Fall pageant, will be known as "Miss Boston," "Queen of the Hub." She will compete at a grand ball for the honor of being named "Miss America" and she may enter the bathing show in which the prize is a Golden Mermaid statue valued at $5,000. She may also win a $10,000 job in the movies if she is the type any of the managers attending the pageant are looking for.

GOT HOOCH FOR FRIEND; FINED $100

Salvatore Scholdenalyia of Harvey place, West Newton, father of seven children, agreed to get hootch for a friend. The police arrested him as he delivered it. In court today he learned that he had received a marked $2 bill from his "friend." Salvatore will pay $100 fine—but he has lost his faith in "friends."

LINERS MAY CUT PRICE OF FARE TO EUROPE

New York, Aug. 21.—Competition among the ocean steamship lines coincident with the entry into service of a dozen new and large fliers is becoming so keen that observers are asking whether the next few months will not see either a drastic cut in rates, designed to attract more passengers for all the lines, or an outbreak of rate warfare.

Ocean travelers whose experience dates from before the war remember that it was possible to obtain passage, first class, on the finest ships for as low as $125, and they cannot understand why the rates today are more than double this figure. The official explanation is that as a result of immigration restriction legislation, first and second cabin business must now earn a substantial profit for the ship operator.

Passenger officials, of course, will not be quoted on the question of lower rates, but some of them admit that the outlook is by no means all it should be.

A substantial increase in travel would certainly follow a cut in rates, as is the case on the South American passenger routes. There the Shipping Board has lowered its fares to such an extent that ships of the same size and speed in the European run would have to make a first class rate of $185, as compared with the present rate of $225.

That a dull Winter is anticipated is shown by the large number of charters made for cruisers in the Mediterranean and around the world. Among the many large ships thus withdrawn from regular passenger service are the Mauretania, Homeric, Adriatic, Rotterdam, Resolute, Samaria, Laconia, Volendam and Empress of Scotland. In addition, many of the other large liners are scheduled to "lay up for repairs" during the slackest months.

CANDLER'S WIFE SORRY FOR HUSBAND

(Copyright, 1922, by International News Service.)

Honolulu, Aug. 21 (By International News Service).—Mrs. Walter T. Candler, although separated from her millionaire banker husband, of Atlanta, Ga., today expressed sympathy for him in the scandal involving a $100,000 damage suit against him by Mrs. Clyde K. Byfield, wife of an Atlanta automobile dealer.

"The Byfield scandal is of a sad nature and is similar to other unnecessary cases against the Candler family," said Mrs. Candler. "It will not affect my attitude towards my husband."

MOTHER OF 3 GETS 30 DAYS FOR THEFT

New York, Aug. 21.—Mrs. Cecelia Cohen, the mother of three children, was sentenced to thirty days in the workhouse, after she pleaded guilty to the theft of a $25 blouse from a department store.

POLITICAL NOTES

William J. Foley will be tendered a reception by the East Boston Foley Club at Amory Hall, East Boston, tonight. The club plans a series of exhibition boxing bouts as well as other novel features. Councillor Foley will address the gathering, continuing his attacks on District Attorney O'Brien and the latter's conduct of the office.

The Greater Boston campaign of S. Howard Donnell of Essex County for the Republican nomination for Attorney-General, will be opened with four rallies in Cambridge tonight. Tomorrow night he will speak in Brighton, Allston and Brookline.

Thomas C. O'Brien, speaking at the annual outing of Alhambra chapter, Knights of Columbus, at Long Island, challenged Joseph C. Pelletier to disprove the charge that drug pedlars have always been protected heretofore.

Councillor William J. Foley, also a candidate for district attorney, made public a letter he sent to District Attorney O'Brien, challenging him to joint debate at Washington and Market streets, Brighton, Thursday night.

District Attorney O'Brien was the target for Councilman F. J. W. Ford, another contestant for the office of district attorney, who spoke at meetings in Charlestown and East Boston.

A rally for Charles A. Winchester, candidate for registrar of deeds for Suffolk County, will be held this week at the Strand ballroom, Back Bay.

District Attorney Endicott Peabody Saltonstall has asked that both Republican and Democratic nominations for district attorney of Middlesex County be given to James C. Reilly of Lowell, assistant district attorney at present.

Assistant Attorney-General Jay R. Benton, who is running for the office of Attorney-General, has produced a list of several hundreds of the Massachusetts Bar who, he says, have endorsed him for the office. Among the lawyers whom he cites as backing his candidacy are District Attorneys Saltonstall of Middlesex County, Katzman of Norfolk County and Hammond of Franklin County.

Joseph B. Ely, Democratic candidate for Governor, has written an open letter to John F. Fitzgerald, his opponent, asking Fitzgerald to name a date for a conference to decide when they shall meet in public debate on campaign issues. Ely declares that prospects for a Democratic victory are brighter than at any time in the past ten years.

Governor Channing Cox surprised local politicians when he announced the list of members of his campaign committee. Prominent in the list is the name of former Attorney-General Henry A. Wyman, who was supposed to be interested in the candidacy of Attorney-General Allen. Henry L. Bowlen of Springfield is chairman of the committee.

"Prices realized on horse & Company sales of carcass beef in Boston for week ending Saturday, August 19th, on alternate sold out, ranged from 7.00 cents to 17.75 cents per pound and averaged 13.78 cents per pound."—Adv.

BACK BAY'S DOPE SUPPLY CUT IN WONG'S ARREST

Several young American girls who peddled cocaine for Ben Wong missed their boss today.

For Ben Wong's slender form, garbed in the latest Broadway fashion, and his black hair carefully oiled reposed in a cell in the Lagrange street police station, while Federal Inspector Jack Hesse received congratulations in cleaning up what the authorities claim was the principal source of the Back Bay's cocaine supply.

Ben Wong resided at No. 12 Oliver street, and enjoyed a wide acquaintance among white women and girls addicted to the use of "white stuff." Also, it is alleged, he regularly employed a half dozen attractive American girls to peddle dope among the wilder set of the Back Bay.

TEN-YEAR PENALTY.

As a result of which Ben will have the distinction of being the first man to stand trial in this State under the new Miller-Jones Act, which provides a penalty of ten years in Atlanta Federal Prison, and $5,000 fine for those selling dope on which no government tax has been paid.

Ben, according to the authorities, was recently in the police court on a similar charge, along with two young white girls, one claiming to be his bride. The case was dismissed, however.

Inspector Hesse noticed a long and continuous line of attractive white women worming its way to and from Ben's domicile in back of Chinatown. Among the visitors he noted several girls given to sniffing the white crystals.

SOURCE OF SUPPLY.

As one of them left the house, Hesse stepped up and spoke to her. She recognized the officer, and admitted that she had been to Ben's house to buy cocaine, because the white girl through whom she was went to secure her supply from Ben had not shown up as usual.

Hesse promptly marched into Ben's house. After placing the Americanized celestial under arrest, he found an ounce of cocaine on which there was no government tax stamp.

Round - the - World Flyers Sought After Cyclone

Calcutta, Aug. 21 (By International News service).—Search was made today for Captain Norman MacMillan and Captain Mallins, round-the-world flyers, who have not been heard from since they left here Friday for Rangoon. Shortly after their departure a cyclone came up and it is feared they were compelled to land in some isolated spot.

The round-the-world flight was formerly in charge of Major W. T. Blake, a British aviator, who set out from London with MacMillan and Mallins May 24. Blake, taken down with appendicitis at Calcutta, had to undergo an operation. He expects to rejoin the party at Vancouver.

U. S. SOLDIER IS HELD FOR THEFT FROM SAILOR

William Dawson, twenty-four, a seaman whose home is in Baltimore, is in a dangerous condition at the East Boston Relief Station, as the result of a brutal beating given him today by three men who set upon him in the Aviation Field at Jeffries Point and robbed him of $50.

Joseph M. Hannify, a private in the United States army, attached to a mine planting ship now in the East Boston drydock, and a member of the party with whom Dawson went to the field, was arraigned in the District Court today charged with the robbery and drunkenness. His case was continued until Wednesday. Bail was set at $3,000.

According to the police, Dawson arrived in Boston three days ago and was paid off, receiving a roll of $300. After what he described as "a good time," Dawson, with $60 left, fell in last night with three young men, one of them Mannify, and after two bottles of moonshine Mannify suggested that the party go to Aviation Field, where they spend the night.

Dawson declares that the men attacked him after reaching the field and robbed him.

BELIEVE AUTO VICTIM WAS HARVARD BOY

Hartford, Ct., Aug. 21.—Patrick Putnam, seventeen-year-old Harvard student and nephew of Mrs. William Lowell Putnam of Boston, is believed to have been the victim of the speeding auto two weeks ago which fled from the scene on the Berlin highway after killing an unidentified youth.

State police investigating the case declare today they had found two witnesses who believed the auto victim was Putnam, the son of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Putnam of New York, who are summering at Martha's Vineyard. Police say they will probably have the body exhumed in order that the Putnam family may try and identify it.

Mrs. Putnam remains unconvinced that the youth killed was her son, although he left two weeks ago for New York, and has not been seen or heard from since.

CATHOLIC TEACHERS IN 18TH CONVENTION

More than a thousand Catholic educators from all parts of the country met today at the opening session of the 18th annual Institute for teachers of the parochial schools of the archdiocese of Boston. The Institute will continue throughout the week, and will be held in the hall of the Boston College High School on James street. The yearly assembly of teachers engaged in Catholic educational work is one of the distinctive features of the Boston diocesan school organization. Some of the most prominent educators in the country are in Boston to attend the institute, representing the twenty-eight religious communities interested in parochial schools.

MYSTIC HEALER MAKES CRIPPLE DROP CRUTCHES AND WALK

NOTED WRITER SEES CURE PERFORMED AT BEACH

By H. H. VAN LOAN,
Noted Magazine and Screen Author.
(Copyright, 1922, by Cosmopolitan News Service.)

Santa Monica, Cal., Aug. 21.—For sixteen years a helpless cripple and then, on his birthday, to be cured by the "faith" healing blessings of an utter stranger who chanced to was the spot where the invalid youth was sitting on the beach, was he miracle I witnessed while strolling along the sands of Santa Monica Bay.

Then, my curiosity aroused, I made inquiries and learned the details.

The boy is Francis Phillips, son of Michael and Mary Phillips, of Santa Monica.

Peter Howard, an eccentric individual, whose strange garb and unusual ways have made him known throughout the environs of the city performed the "cure."

PENT FORTUNE IN VAIN.

The parents of young Phillips had spent practically all of their means seeking to gain health for their unfortunate son, but without avail.

The boy was sitting at the entrance to a tent on the sands of the Santa Monica beach. His mother was nearby, waiting to act as his arms and legs and administer to his wants.

Other children all about him were running and shouting in glee, but Francis Phillips was suffering a bitterness of grief, for it was his birthday and he could not even gurgle down to the lapping waves which scintillated in the sun so invitingly and so near. Planting his crutches in the sand the boy essayed to rise, but he fell back with a look of pain.

Just at that moment, Howard, clad in a flowing robe and with his uncut hair dangling about his shoulders, came stalking up the beach.

His eyes fell upon the boy and he went toward the tent.

"Madame," Howard said to the boy's mother, "I can relieve your son."

GETS UP AND WALKS.

"Goodness knows, we would be mighty grateful if you would," the woman said. "We have spent a small fortune trying to help him and haven't succeeded yet."

Turning to the lad, Howard extended his hands and commanded:

"Rise and claim your own! Get up!"

Francis Phillips looked startled. His first feeble attempt to rise was unsuccessful, but on a second effort he got to his feet.

"Throw away your crutches and walk," commanded Howard.

The boy cast aside the crutches and walked down the beach. Turning, he came back to the tent. There was a look of incredulous surprise in his eyes.

"You will never need those crutches again," Howard told the youth, as he turned away and resumed his journey along the seaside.

The mother gathered the son into her arms with a sob of joy and when she released him the lad walked about rather unsteadily but apparently without pain.

Quaint Old-Fashioned Party Held at North Shore, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

ONE of the prettiest affairs of the North Shore Summer was the old-fashioned garden party at the home of Mrs. T. Jefferson Coolidge in Manchester.

The girls, who entertained over 200 people as well as many children, were like pictures from ancient albums in their old-time hoop skirts and bonnet.. Mrs. Coolidge's terrace made an ideal setting for the affair, given by the Children's Hospital Clubs of the North Shore.

"Little Black Sambo" was the first number given, with Charles Amory, Jr., as the brave little Sambo. The tigers were very cunning when they crawled across the piazza steps in their tiger skins. The children in this act were in charge of Mrs. Charles Pelham Curtis, Jr.

The next on the program was a duet by Miss Frances Weld and Miss Grace Sargent. Miss Weld, who is to be a debutante of next Winter, was in an old-fashioned white dress caught with red roses, a black and white bonnet faced with flowers and black streamers. She is the daughter of the Bernard Welds of Beverly Farms. Miss Sargent, the daughter of Sullivan Sargent, and also a coming debutante, was in lavender with a yellow bonnet trimmed with flowers. Both girls carried old-fashioned bouquets.

A quadrille followed, with the Misses Nancy and Cynthia Means, Frances Hutchinson, Harriet and Mary Hopkinson, Gertrude Russell, Agnes Boardman, and Elizabeth Shober, all clad in old dresses. They were graceful, and ended the number with deep courtesies and throwing roses to the audience.

There were other numbers, including a trio of folk songs, and Rosehara's pantomine, which did great credit to the famous instructor. The different tables were very attractively arranged, especially the delicatessen table, which had several wonderful pieces of work prepared by Mrs. Marshall Field's French chef.

All the children who came, as well as those taking part in the affair, were in quaint costumes, and it was voted quite the prettiest affair that the Shore has seen. The credit goes mostly to Mrs. Robert Means and Mrs. Bernard Weld, who were in general charge.

AN INTERESTING sale of children's hats will be held on Monday, September 11, at "Highwall," the residence of Mrs. Oliver Ames at Pride's Crossing, from 10 to 5 o'clock. The sale will be in charge of a committee, headed by Mrs. W. A. Parker, Mrs. Oliver Ames, Jr., and Mrs. George Putnam, and will be in behalf of the Ladies' Aid of the Infants' Hospital, Boston.

SECRETARY ANDREW MELLON merely settled his family at the Frederick Ayer's estate "Avalon," at Pride's Crossing, which he has taken for the rest of the Summer, and then jetted back to Washington. His daughter, Miss Ailsa Mellon, and son, Paul Mellon, with Miss Alice Sylvester, make up the family left there. Visiting Miss Mellon at present is Miss Margaret Harding of Washington, a younger sister of Miss Alice Harding and Mrs. Frederick H. Prince, Jr. (Elizabeth Harding), of Pride's Crossing. Miss Margaret Harding will be one of the bridesmaids at the wedding of Miss Alice Harding to Stephen Poll of New York on September 7.

Miss Alice Harding, who has concluded her visit with her fiance's family at their estate at Southampton, L. I., has returned to the Frederick Princes, Jr., to stay until her wedding, which will take place there.

A PRETTY noon wedding was that of Miss Pauline Croll, daughter of the Albert Irvin Crolls, to Robert Sproule Stevens, son of Mrs. Frederick Stevens of Washington. The ceremony, which was only witnessed by members of the two families, was performed by Rev. Dr. Elwood W. Worcester of Emmanuel Church, Boston, at "Sunnybank," Gales Point, Manchester, the Summer place of the Crolls.

The bride's gown was of white georgette crepe with pearl trimmings and a Duchesse lace train. The bridal veil was held with a wreath of orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley, and wore a diamond pendant, a gift of the groom. Her only attendant was her little niece, Miss Pauline De Friez, daughter of Mrs. Thaddeus De Friez, who was dressed in pale yellow crepe de chine.

Mr. Stevens had for his best man, his brother, Frederick Stevens, of Buffalo, N. Y.

A reception followed in the house which was charmingly decorated with flowers and vines.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevens will live in Ithaca, N. Y., where Mr. Stevens is a professor of law in Cornell University. He was graduated from Harvard in 1910, and from the Harvard Law School three years later.

FOREIGN WAR VETS TO HOLD EXCURSION

The members of the Thomas J. Fitzgerald Post No. 561, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of South Boston, have made arrangements for their annual moonlight excursion to be held next Friday evening, August 25. The Rose Standish, the largest of the Nantasket Steamship Company's steamers, has been chartered for the event. The boat will leave Rowe's Wharf at 6:15 p. m. for a two-hour sail down the harbor. There will be dancing on the main deck.

CAPT. ARMSTRONG'S SISTER DIES IN PARIS

Captain A. C. Armstrong of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation received a cablegram from Paris today telling him his sister, Mrs. Belle Armstrong Whitney, was dead in her home at No. 11 Rue Auber. Mrs. Armstrong was the widow of the late Dr. Charles A. Whitney. She was one of the few women given the cross of a Chevalier in the French Legion of Honor.

SEES HARDING ON BILL FOR COAL PROBE

Washington, Aug. 21.—Chairman Winslow of the House Commerce Committee, after a conference today with President Harding, announced he would introduce immediately a bill to create a fact finding coal commission as recommended by the President in his special message to Congress.

The measure Mr. Winslow said, would call for appointment by the President of a commission not to exceed nine members with instructions to report to the chief executive and, Congress by July 1, 1923. The commission would have wide powers of investigation including the right to examine the books of various coal producing companies.

Coal Strike Sessions on Again

Philadelphia, Aug. 21.—Representatives of Anthracite workers and of the men who operate the mines assembled here again today for another session of the negotiations to reconcile the differences between the two factions which have kept the hard coal mines idle since April 1.

The same personnel of representatives present at last week's parleys were here for today's session. John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, remained in the city over the week end.

Both national and State governmental influences are being exerted upon the owners and operators to make every concession possible.

RIO FLYERS START AGAIN ON JOURNEY

Miami, Fla., Aug. 21.—Lieutenant Walter Hinton, in his giant seaplane, the Sampaio Correia, hopped off at West Palm Beach at 10:15 a. m., bound for Nassau. The pilot and crew had a good rest. Weather conditions favorable, they hoped to make a pleasant voyage over the Gulf Stream to the Bahamas on their way to Rio Janeiro.

Kitchen Canaries to Learn Singing in Servants' College

London, Aug. 21.—England hopes to solve its servant problem by establishing a college for the training of young women in domestic science and the useful arts. The government has set aside $250,000 for the purpose.

The cost of training an unemployed girl so that she can take a situation in domestic science is $100.

The girls are given a course lasting thirteen weeks. They are taught cookery, laundry work, needle work, infant welfare and hygiene.

They are given instruction in the arts of singing and piano playing, which are considered indispensable adjuncts to the all-around servant who wishes to brighten her mistress' life with something more than mere culinary accomplishments or household industry.

KILLS TWO, ENDS OWN LIFE IN LOVE TRAGEDY

Portland, Mich., Aug. 21.—William Hughes went to Alaska to seek his fortune. He returned to find his wife had divorced him and married his brother David. He accepted an invitation to make his home with them.

William tried to smile at the game of hearts, in which he was the loser. The effort ended in tragedy. It came when he found his brother and former wife in an affectionate attitude.

"I'm going to kill the whole family," he shouted. "I've waited for weeks for this chance to get even for what you two did to me while I was away."

William shot his brother to death. Mrs. Hughes and her daughter rushed from the house. William pursued, firing. The child was killed. Mrs. Hughes fell exhausted. The madman turned the gun on himself and fired.

Mrs. Hughes said William had shown little feeling when she told him she had divorced him and married his brother.

"He didn't seem to mind it at all," she said, "and accepted David's invitation to come and live with us until he could get located. I believe now he came just to plot our death."

What really happened in the Garden of Eden?

What is the real truth of the Garden-of-Eden episode?—the cause of the first conflict between God and man? Did Eve mean to do evil when she ate of the forbidden fruit? Why did our first parents think they could hide from God? And why did they want to hide from Him? Basil King answers these questions—and many more—in "The Discovery of God," a series that interprets the revelations of God made to the mighty men of Biblical times. These articles, of which "The Eternal God" is the first, are the most important Good Housekeeping has ever published.

They beat the high cost of living
And how they did it should prove a lesson to every other young couple who is going away the best years of their lives while they may get to earn more money. Visit Love and the H. C. of L. is very likely to lose its grip to the marriage license bureau.

What will they wear this Fall?
Important changes of the fashions in dress and millinery will appear this month of very special interest. The radical changes in your own and all the puzzling questions concerning suits, dresses, hats, shoes, the new materials, corsets, children's dresses, are answered in September Good Housekeeping. In the same issue, there is also a lesson in dressmaking and new needlework designs.

The truth about child labor!
Child labor still flourishes. And now the Supreme Court has decided against the constitutionality of the Child Labor Law—a law which affected 250,000 boys and girls. Something must be done about it. Good Housekeeping presents the situation as told by Raymond G. Fuller, formerly of the National Child Labor Committee.

If your heart is broken—
At some time or other, everyone's heart is broken. There is no avoiding it in part of life. Whether you are a young man or girl or a mature adult, there is a cure—a surprising cure. You'll find it in September Good Housekeeping.

The facts about a most important health subject, by Dr. Harvey W. Wiley.

It's warm, but one must eat!
The late summer food problem is solved by the Department of Cookery of Good Housekeeping Institute. You'll find many recipes for new chilled vegetable entrees, unsuspected uses for egg yolks, 8 new ham recipes, 12 delicious fruit desserts—as well as the primer of housework and many other household discoveries.

What about Women's future in politics?
Will politics change women—or themselves, them? Are women equal to the task of government? Can they achieve reforms? How can they attain more power in politics? A brilliant article by a famous authority—Elizabeth Frazer. In the same issue, "Letters from a Senator's Wife," by Frances Parkinson Keyes.

Divorce—a human shipwreck
A million users carry the news of the failure of another marriage. Two million people read it. And ten thousand other married couples go on their happy ways, and no one ever hears about them. Why? Because their experience is too common to be sensational. Their story is, nevertheless, the most significant story in the world. Read it in Ben Ames Williams's big, new novel, "The Adventurers."

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

Now investigating conditions in the West.

Let me introduce you to Jerry.

I've just met Jerry. Jerry lives at a lonely spot away up near the summit of the Sierra Nevada Mountains. The sun is shining here today, but when Winter comes snowstorms and blizzards rage fiercely on the far-off mountain top. It is not uncommon for the whole surrounding forest and desert to be covered with 10 feet of snow, becoming utterly impassable to human beings.

Miles distant from Jerry's little habitat are quartered several hundred men who remain snowed in all winter while they tunnel their way through a giant mountain to bring to the service of Southern California the waters of a distant lake.

Jerry is the sole connecting link between these human moles and the nearest impost of civilization and transportation.

Jerry is the man who carries the mail and medicine and other urgent necessities from the edge of the inhabited world across an arctic mountain top and down through a raging canyon to the cooped-up lollers who are burrowing, burrowing, burrowing their way into the granite heart of the Sierra Nevadas at a height of almost 10000 feet.

I've said that no human being can brave the awful storms and tempests which rage here when the whole earth is buried under snow to the depth of more than three times the height of puny man. How does Jerry achieve his daily journey?

Jerry has a pack of Alaska dogs. They are called dogs, but each of them is at least half wolf and the leader of the pack actually is three-quarters wolf, and is ever feeling the call of the wild so strongly that were she unleashed for one instant she would take to the hills and revert to the wild life of the wolf.

For almost two years Jerry had not descended from the mountain cabin to any city or town or other centre where men meet to buy and sell and carry on social intercourse. But, just as Jerry's dog wolves feel the call of the wild, Jerry's heart responds to the tugging of civilization and human association. Jerry made rather elaborate preparations for descending with his tobacco and far down the mountains where trains run and stores and movies and so forth abound.

When the day and the hour came for Jerry to set out on his trip to civilization, he buckled himself in the garments of the people who inhabit the plains, in what Jerry called "store clothes."

When he approached his fourfoot-wide cabin he was excited. For a moment they did not recognize him. Then, when their master came up and began to hail them good-bys, they sensed that something was wrong and that he was going away from them. Then, began to whine and then cry. The sounds that came from them were like those of many bodily-weeping. hysterical women. His daily associates of many stressful days and nights crowded round Jerry as if they would hem him in and prevent his forsaking them.

As he turned his back and made for the road without them, the pack set up a wailing and howling and lamentation that echoed and re-echoed throughout the rock-ribbed mountain precipices.

Jerry has not since left or thought of leaving the companionship of his faithful four-footed friends. And judging by the affection I've just seen them exhibit for him and he for them, I rather think that scores and scores of years will have to get along as best they can without Jerry.

Railroad Issues Lead Strong Wall St. Market Into 1922 Highs for Many Stocks

PROFIT-TAKING APPEARS IN LAST HOUR

Railroad issues led a strong New York market into new highs for the year, with several moving at the latter rising to 3¼ per cent. Rails have not shown up better this year, and the bull action spread out over the general list, with some profit taking evident in the last hour.

New York Central was up 2⅜ at 100¾, passing par for the first time since 1917.

Highs for the year were set up by the following rails: Canadian Pacific, Lehigh Valley, St. Louis & San Francisco preferred, Delaware & Hudson, Peoria & Eastern, New Orleans, Texas & Mexico, St. Paul common and preferred, Southern Pacific, Great Northern preferred, New Orleans, Texas & Mexico, Baltimore & Ohio, Chicago & St. Louis, St. Louis & Southwestern, Chicago & Eastern Illinois preferred, Pere Marquette common and preferred, Illinois Central, Western Maryland, Chicago & Northwestern, Atchison, Chesapeake & Ohio, Lake Erie & Western preferred, Louisville & Nashville, Norfolk & Western, Union Pacific and Wabash preferred A.

Records for all time were made by Allied Chemical, American Car & Foundry, Columbia Gas, Corn Products, Lima Locomotive and American Locomotive.

Peak prices for 1922 were established by Sinclair Consolidated, American Snuff, Reynolds Tobacco A and B, Pacific Gas & Electric, Brown Shoe, American Sugar, Cluett & Peabody, American Woolen, Baldwin, Railway Steel Spring, Consolidated Gas, Famous Players, United Retail Stores and U. S. Rubber.

U. S. Steel made its mark at 104¾, up ⅞.

Otis Elevator was up 2 points and gains of one to three or more points by American Best Sugar, American Tobacco, Mex. Petro, Tidewater Oil and Houston Oil.

Seaboard Air Line 6s 4½ Points Higher

In the New York bond market, strength in speculative railroad mortgages, especially the Seaboard Air Line and St. Paul issues, was the outstanding development. Seaboard Air Line, 6's jumped 4¾ points, the refunding 4's were up 2, and the adjustment 5's, 1¾.

Gains of one to 1¾ points were made by St. Paul Refunding 4½'s, convertible 4½'s, convertible 5's and the 4's of 1925.

Reactionary tendency was shown by Wabash second 4's and Southern Pacific convertible 4's. Liberty issues held steady.

Ventura Oil.

To R. McQ., Brighton.—Ventura Oil is a speculative issue which has been very well to date. Wilson, Hooker & Co. sum up case in their market letter, saying: "Earnings of $4.45 a share on the 500,000 shares outstanding speaks well for the position of Ventura Consolidated Oil fields in the California oil industry, and explains the steadiness displayed by the stock during the past few months.

"A company which is now earning at the annual rate of more than $4 a share, before depletion and taxes, and can show net current assets amounting to about $3,000,000 over $1,600,000 cash, with no debts and with production and sales holding up satisfactorily, would certainly seem to be well under consideration from a market standpoint."

American Steel Foundries.

To M. B. N., Cedar St.—I understand American Steel foundries already has sufficient orders on hand—75 to 80 per cent.—for rest of year. For six months ended June 30, 1922, reported surplus of $1,482,859 after charges and Federal tax; equal, after preferred dividends, to $1.49 a share on 250,401,000 common stock (par $33 1-3) against $354,775, or six cents a share, the same period of 1921.

STOCKS ARE STEADY IN LONDON MARKET

Stocks were steady in London. Consols sold 55⅝; British war bonds, 95⅜; 5s, 100¾; 4½s, 97¾; 4s, 101½; funding, 83¾, off ⅛; French 5s, 37, up ⅝; Russian 5s, 16; 4½s, 8, 6s, 6 up 1; Rio Tinto, 27¾, up ¼.

LEAGUE ISSUE MEANS DEFEAT, SAYS REED

By CORNELIUS VANDERBILT, Jr.

Copyright, by C.T. Newspaper Service.

Washington, Aug. 21.—Warning the Democratic party that if the next political campaign is fought upon the question of the league of nations or any similar association, the party faced certain defeat, Senator James Reed of Missouri, just back from his victory in the primary elections, where he was renominated despite the opposition of former President Woodrow Wilson, declared that the issues of the hour were the lifting of the tax burden from the American people, the reclamation and development of all land now idle and a solution of the conflict being waged between capital and labor. The Senator said:

"In my judgment the political party in the next political campaign which pitches its tents on a battlefield which has been lost will insure its defeat in November. One Waterloo should be enough to satisfy even the Napoleon of the last political battle."

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

"Speaking of the League of Nations, there are many people who believe in the phrase, but there are very few who believe in the doctrines which are necessarily involved in the idea of the league. I have recently campaigned the State of Missouri, where I spoke to probably 200,000 people. I expressed the sentiment which was so loudly and universally applauded and cheered as when I declared to my audience that I would never commit the United States to an agreement which would bind us to send a single American soldier across the seas to die in the conflicts of other nations with which we had no direct national concern.

"While campaigning I used a kindred expression which was received with almost kindred warmth. It referred to the following statement which I repeatedly made:

"I am a nationalist. I am not an internationalist. I render allegiance to but one country—the United States of America. I reverence but one flag, the Stars and Stripes.

"The issues upon which we must go before the country are the great living issues of the hour. Until the last man and woman now living have gone from the earth, the government will of necessity be compelled to raise immense revenues to meet the indebtedness of the war.

ASSAILS HARDING'S POLICIES.

"How shall these revenues be raised? Shall the burden be taken from the rich and prosperous and shifted to the backs of the toiling masses? Shall we adhere to the policy of the present administration, which sought to reduce the income taxes of 12,000 millionaires by $196,000,000 per year while practically granting no relief to the man of moderate means?

"Shall we adhere to the policy which repealed the excess profits taxes, thus depriving the government of $450,000,000 during the present year and relieving by that amount the corporations making profits in excess of 10 per cent?

"Shall the people approve the attempt of the present administration to repeal the tax on corporate stock which aggregates $75,000,000 a year and cut a tax which was not felt by the small corporation, but which brings nearly $2,000,000 per annum from other great financial and industrial concerns?"

"Shall we ratify the attempt of the present administration in its attempt which was largely successful to wipe out all of the taxes I have referred to and at the same time ratify its refusal to pay the soldiers' bonus for the alleged reason that there cannot be sufficient moneys raised to pay the bonus?

FADDISM IS DOOMED.

"The elections seem to indicate that some of the most ardent advocates of experimental faddism in government are now being held to a strict accountability by the masses of people.

"But, on the other hand, we are today faced with a great conflict between capital and labor. It is idle for wise men to close their eyes to the fact that the last quarter of a century has brought industrial and economic revolution.

"At the present moment a few great railroad chiefs may tie up the transportation of 110,000,000 people by an arbitrary order affecting their employes. Upon the other hand a few leaders of employes may just as effectively paralyze the business of the land. What is true of the railroads is measurably true of the great steel and coal industries, and to an extent of many other great fundamental necessities.

CAPITAL VS. LABOR.

"In some way means must be worked out by which these tremendous disputes, injurious alike to capital and labor and particularly destructive to the general public can be solved without resource to force on either hand. The political force which comes forward with a just solution ought to gain the confidence of the American people.

"Another question of vast importance is the internal development of our country. Until within the past few years the surplus energies of the United States could find relief and expansion on the seemingly unlimited unoccupied lands of the country. There was no special reason for reclaiming or protecting swamp lands or bottom lands so long as vast stretches of country, fitted by nature for habitation and cultivation, lay open for settlement.

"But the public domain is gone. The population is still rapidly increasing. It has now become a high duty to forward-looking statesmen to develop a vast scheme of internal improvements which will harness and control our rivers, prevent devastating floods, reclaim enormous domains of swamp lands now going to waste and give them to agriculture.

1,400 Gallons of Rye Go Into Gutter

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 21.—Thirsty hundreds stood about the streets at North Carolina and Mediterranean avenues and watched detectives pour 1,400 gallons of rye whiskey into the gutter.

The contraband liquor and an elaborate and expensive still capable of producing 100 gallons of whiskey a day, was seized in a raid, Charles Phillips was arrested.

According to the detectives, saloons and other places in the city have been supplied with whiskey from this source for months past.

COX ACCUSED OF DECEIT IN JUDGESHIP

Governor Cox was condemned in two resolutions adopted by the Columbus Clubs of Massachusetts according to an announcement made by Senator Andrew A. Cassama of Revere today.

The clubs, 1 nadopting the resolutions, also voted 59 to 5, to support Attorney-General J. Weston Allen in his campaign for Governor.

One resolution, condemning the Governor for deceit, set forh ha a delegation of prominent Italian citizens conferred with him asking for recognition for Italian-Americans. The Governor was quoted as saying that if an opportunity ever presented itself he would appoint a representative of the Italian race a justice of the Boston Municipal Court.

Judge Wentworth died within twenty hours thereafter, according to the resolution, and the same committee waited on Governor Cox again. He told them, the resolution stated, that no appointment to fill the vacancy would be made until September and that only a Boston man would be named. A few days later David A. Lourie of Chelsea was appointed, the resolution stated.

The second resolution condemned the Governor for organizing a coal committee to distribute coal when there was no coal to distribute, and placing a charge of 29 cents a ton for supervising the distribution of any coal that does come in.

LLOYD GEORGE

LORD NORTHCLIFFE

In the death of Lord Northcliffe, England loses one of her greatest public men, and the world one of its greatest publishers of all time. Starting without money or influence, he made himself, through courage and ability, not only a leader of his own profession, but a power for progressive thought wherever the printed word is read.

Truth about Lord Northcliffe

Just returned from his triumphant trip around the world, the richest and most powerful newspaper man in all Europe engaged in one last bitter dispute with the British Premier. Lloyd George, who is by no means the first statesman Northcliffe made—or unmade—will certainly be the last. Though he actively managed nearly a hundred publications—ranging from the famous London "Times" and "Daily Mail" with 2,000,000 circulation a day to the "Children's Encyclopedia," Lord Northcliffe's greatest strength never lay in his newspapers. WHERE? Read the real facts in Hearst's International for September. More fascinating than any novel—an intimate personal study of an astounding man, by Norman Angell, for ten years one of Northcliffe's trusted editors.

A Fight in St. Bartholomew's

WHAT would happen next Sunday morning if Christ, himself, with a few lowly followers, walked up the aisle of our most fashionable church? Read what did happen in Upton Sinclair's new and sensational novel "They Call Me Carpenter!" Read how differently the different newspapers reported the disturbance. Read in Hearst's International for September how "John Doe Carpenter" was ejected from his own church and thrown into the city prison as an anarchist!

The Better Wife

A Novel of a Woman Who Found Herself

SHE felt like other women, thought like other women—and yet her terrible past, cruelly forced upon her—would not down! This is only one of the three great novels—by Gouverneur Morris, Upton Sinclair, and Sir Gilbert Parker—in Hearst's International for September. You will find also seven sparkling short stories. As a magazine of Fiction alone Hearst's International should go at the very top of your reading list. Try it this month!

Henry Swallows Old Bait

HENRY FORD'S whole PROOF of a world-wide Jew Conspiracy was founded on a certain Protocols. Did you know these costly documents were: (1) complete forgeries. (2) discredited in four languages before reaching Detroit. (3) copied out of a 60 year old book that had nothing to do with the Jews. For the silliest folly of all the JEW-MANIA, read the latest of Norman Hapgood's sensational series in September Hearst's International.

Is Your Country Club Immoral?

IS your Country Club more immoral than a Broadway Dance Hall? Is it worse for your young son or daughter than an uptown Cabaret? Down to Frank Ward O'Malley on his quiet New Jersey farm came the news that the world was getting wickeder and wickeder. Naturally he could not withstand the temptation to go onto Broadway and see for himself. What he found in New York's Night Life he tells you in "SINNING IN SILKS and SANCTITY" in Hearst's International for September. In the same great number, read "Peggy," "In the New York Manner," "When a Girl's Thirty," and "The Gioconda Smile," four of the seven unusual short stories to be found only in this magazine.

WORKING with Norman Hapgood to make Hearst's International the most distinguished magazine in the world is Will Bradley, famed for his skill in design. In the September number he has created in picture, type, and brilliant colors a magazine to delight your eye.

Can You Trust Your Doctor?

WITH nearly fifty thousand remedies to choose from, no wonder all but the soundest doctors fall into handing over—as a personal prescription—some skillfully exploited patent cure! No wonder hundreds of thousands of people prescribe for themselves across the drug counter.

Nothing in your life is more important than the choice of a doctor. Whether you choose for your family an alert up-to-date physician or a respectable quack may mean the difference between happiness and utter misery!

DOCTORS and DRUG MONGERS—the first of a series by Dr. Paul R. de Kruif, in Hearst's International for September, tells in clear, simple language the exact principles that will guide you safely in the choice of a doctor. And every mother or father, every responsible guardian, every man or woman, who must know how his doctor measures up, will find this article absolutely beyond the value of money!

NATIONAL TENNIS DOUBLES TITLE PLAY AT LONGWOOD CLUB

NET STARS FLOCK TO CHESTNUT HILL

By FRED C. LANE.

The leading luminaries of the tennis world, including both sexes, will appear at the national doubles championship tournament at the Chestnut Hill courts of the Longwood Cricket Club today.

Players representing such countries as Australia, Spain, France and Japan, in addition to our own racquet wielders, are on hand for the biggest event staged in this country.

The national doubles match is only one of the seven tournaments that will be completed before the end of the week, bringing to a climax the greatest year that tennis has ever experienced in this city.

Women's singles, boys' and junior tournaments, mixed doubles, father and son tournament and veterans' doubles will make Boston the stopping-off place for the most notable group of tennis players ever to visit here.

Such stars as William Tilden, Vincent Richards, William Johnston, Wallace Johnson, R. Norris Williams, Watson Washburn, Francis Hunter, the Kinsey brothers, Gerald Patterson and Pat O'Hara Wood of Australia, Zeno Shimizu of Japan, Jean Borotra of France, Mrs. Molla May Sutton Mallory, Miss Helen Wills, Mrs. May Sutton Bundy and a host of others are listed to appear at this gigantic tennis reunion.

Play will start in the national doubles, boys' and junior tournaments this afternoon. The last two will be played on the intown courts. The women's singles and mixed doubles will begin tomorrow.

Present Title-Holders Get Started Today

William Tilden and Vincent Richards, present holders of the cup, which they have successfully defended for three years, oppose Zeno Shimizu and Francis Hunter today.

This match will give a championship touch which seldom is present on an opening day.

Hunter and Shimizu are excellent singles players and will no doubt make a strong combination.

The performances of Vincent Richards on the courts since he was named on the Davis cup team have been remarkable. Tilden needs no comment. He has outshone any of our American players, and to date the same goes for any of the invaders.

Johnston Teamed Up With Wallace Johnston

The Spanish Davis cup players, Manuel Alonso and Count de Gomar, will make their first appearance in Boston, playing Fritz Bastian and R. H. Burdick, youthful stars from Indianapolis.

There was considerable anxiety anent the appearance of William Johnston, that brilliant California member of the American Davis cup team.

When the entries were first received his name was linked up with that of James O. Anderson of the Australian team. The latter, who was stricken with bronchitis last week, decided to reserve his strength for the big match between America and Australia at Philadelphia in September.

Edwin Sheafe, president of the Longwood Club, kept the wire hot seeking a partner for Johnston, and announced that Wallace Johnston of Philadelphia, famous chop stroke artist, was eager to play and glad to be bracketed with Johnston.

Borotra With Niles in Place of Cochet

Mat Niles of Boston was also doubtful because of the return to France of Henri Cochet, but Jean Borotra, third member of the French Davis cup team, was signed up, making a possible triple alliance of their wares in quest of the trophy now held by Tilden and Richards.

DILBOY POST CLAIMS GAME BY FORFEIT

The second game of the series between the George Dilboy Post, Y. M. C. A. and the Somerville B. B. C. scheduled for this evening, has been claimed by the vets on a forfeit. The soldier boys claim the Somerville B. B. C. failed to keep their agreement on game scheduled for this evening, hence the forfeit. The Dilboy Post was fortunate, however, in securing a game with the Colonial A. C. of Boston. The game will start promptly at 6 o'clock tonight at the Richard Trum playground, Somerville.

HAGEN AND KIRKWOOD BOW TO BRITISHERS

CITY ATHLETIC FINALS WILL BE GIVEN

Two weeks from today the Boston Park Department will consider its work complete, as far as the out-door competitive recreation is concerned.

The officials of the department have been working through the entire Summer preparing for the grand finale, when the youth of the city will be given a chance to compete in a swimming meet, tennis tournament and athletic carnival.

The trials have been held and on Sunday those who qualified will take part in the finals. The winners will be awarded gold, silver and bronze medals.

On Saturday afternoon there will be the semi-finals of the swimming races for the several districts. In Dorchester there will be two meets, one at Savin Hill and the other at Fremont street. Children of South Boston will battle it out in the salty drink at the L Street Bathe, while the youngsters of the North and West Ends will have their thrills off North End Park Beach. Those who are interested in Charlestown can enter the races at Dewey Beach while in East Boston activities will be held at the Wood Memorial Park Beach.

On the following day the winners will compete at the Head House, City Point, at 2:30 p. m. in the finals.

New Record Set Up for Semi-Pro Team

Akron, Ohio, Aug. 21.—A new pitching record for the current season is believed to have been established when the General Tires and Firestones of the Industrial League, a semi-professional organization, played twenty innings to a scoreless tie, the game being called on account of darkness.

Seven hits were made off Jim Vaughn of the General Tires, while only five were made off Bob McKinsley of the Firestones. Fifty-seven struck out, Vaughn whiffing 24 while McKinsley fanned 33.

Vaughn has pitched 35 consecutive scoreless innings.

SMITH-MARTONE WILL BATTLE TONIGHT

New York, Aug. 21.—The star attraction of twelve rounds at the Commodore A. A., Jersey City tonight will bring together Rocky Smith, the welterweight of Battle Creek, Mich., and Harry Martone, the Jersey City warrior. It was at this arena two weeks ago that Smith made quite a hit when he whipped K. O. Kaplan decisively.

The ten-round semi-final will be between Johnny Yarns, the Jersey City featherweight, and Larry Regan of Weehawken. This is a grudge affair between the two lads who have been claiming the New Jersey title for several years.

CIVICS AND MALDEN IN DECIDING GAME

The Magoun Square Civics will trek over to Malden tonight when they hook up with the Malden City team in the third and final game of the series. As both teams have won a game, the game this event of should be full of pep, as both teams are traveling on high. The Civics will use either Laird or Wentland, while the city team manager will probably send in Young to try and cop the final game.

BAROCH PLANS A STUD IN VIRGINIA

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Racing has acquired a powerful recruit in Bernard M. Baruch, millionaire Wall street operator. His interest in racing and thoroughbred breeding is keen. For some time he has owned a few brood mares and several times has been a silent associate of racers in the ownership of horses of more or less renown.

One of them was William Laimbeer, popular man about town and Wall street operator of New York, who lost his life in a railroad-automobile accident some years ago. Another is Admiral Cary T. Grayson, who is rapidly organizing a stud of considerable proportions.

Baruch has an idea that he will go into breeding on a large scale, with a stud established in either Virginia, the valley section of Virginia. This as yet undeveloped ambition moved him to spend his first money at a thoroughbred yearling sale for a couple of fillies. He was the purchaser at the recent sale of Captain Philip M. Walker's and Samuel Ross' yearlings of two stars fillies by Peter Pan, out of Juliet 2d and by Cudgel, out of High Pass.

For the Peter Pan filly he paid $6,000. The Cudgel yearling cost him $8,100. Ross bred the youngsters in Kentucky.

Havre De Grace, Md., Aug. 21.—The program of the Hartford Agricultural and Breeders' Association for September racing at Havre de Grace, which will begin on September 26, to run through September 30, will include three $10,000 added money specials—the Eastern Shore Handicap, for two-year-olds, six furlongs; the Potomac Handicap, for three-year-olds, one mile and one-sixteenth; the Havre de Grace Handicap for three-year-olds and over, one mile and a furlong.

BROOKES GIVES ADVICE TO ANZACS

By JOSEPH S. ROGERS

New York, Aug. 21.—As everybody knows, Australia will meet the United States in the Davis cup tennis finals the first week in September at Forest Hills, L. I., so speculation is on as to the real strength of the challengers.

Although Gerald Patterson and Pat O'Hara Wood failed to impress in their victories over the French and Spaniards, it must be realized that neither was in good physical condition, while their team as a whole was materially weakened by the illness of J. O. Anderson, who has been confined to bed the past week with a heavy cold. Anderson's condition is much improved and he is certain to play in the singles in the challenge round.

Those who are counting on a walk-over for Wilden Johnston, Richards and Williams may have a rude awakening. The Australians will be twenty-five per cent stronger against the American combination than they were against Spain and in addition they will have a psychological advantage which will count greatly in their favor.

They have behind them the spirit of Norman Brookes, the immortal Australian, the many international titles who selected the team and taught them all he knew. It is known that Patterson has been in constant cable communication with Brookes and that Norman is entirely responsible for the strategy to be followed by the invaders.

Patterson's victory over Alonzo in straight sets in Philadelphia gives the lie to those who thought the lean, sunburned Hawaiian was slipping. Patterson played his best since his arrival in this country and figures to have a chance to defeat either Tilden, Johnson or both. Any over-confidence on the part of the Australians and the huge silver bowl is likely to go on a long unexpected journey.

Just a word about Alonzo—he has proved that Spain can produce something more than bull fighters in the sporting way. His exhibition against Wood when he pulled out a victory after a seemingly hopeless task in the stand out as one of the epics of the sport. Alonzo is likely to do considerable in international tennis before he is through. He is the most colorful player who ever came to this country.

While no official announcement has been forthcoming as to who will play for America in the singles and doubles, it is learned from the highest authority that Williams, although captain of the team, will not play. He will look after the business conditions surrounding the match, leaving Tilden, Johnston and Richards unhampered by anything except playing. Tilden and Johnston will play in the singles and Richards will pair with Tilden for the doubles.

Neither Tilden nor Johnston has been beaten in Davis Cup match in singles or doubles. They are just as good as ever they were and it is a favorite in any match in which his opponent was not an American

Lexington Wins Tennis

The Lexington Tennis Club defeated the Winchester Boat Club players in four matches out of seven on Lexington Field courts.

CONWAY PICKS WILLS TO BEAT JACKSON

By JACK CONWAY.

Harry Wills will not have any trouble in defeating Buddy Jackson in their twelve-round bout at Newark tonight. The colored heavyweight champion should win by a knockout.

HARRY WILLS

Wills, one of the greatest fighters the ring game has known during the past fifteen years, will be pitted against a very ordinary third rater.

Jackson has done virtually no fighting of any account. His press agent says Buddy has battled some tough opposition in Europe and South America.

All of which helps the batting average as much as home runs during a Spring barnstorming tour.

Wills is going to battle Dempsey and as a result he will not be sent against any tough opposition in the meanwhile. It will help the Dempsey-Wills match if the colored champion knocks out three or four duds.

It is expected that tonight's tussle will draw a big crowd. The regular fight fans are anxious to get a line on Wills as he is today, while there are always enough suckers parading along Broadway to put over any kind of a bunk ten show.

Dempsey Only One Who Can't Get a Setup

Jack Dempsey, a real fighter, appears to be the only champion or near champion who cannot get an occasional setup. When Jack fights, he has to go to the post with some battler who at least is tough.

The authorities screech from the housetops whenever an effort is made to put on a match in which Dempsey is to figure. Joe Lynch, Johnny Kilbane, Benny Leonard, Jack Britton, Johnny Wilson, Harry Greb and about everybody else can go into the sticks and grab a flock of dough bouncing blows off the chins of fourth raters. Furthermore they are well paid for their services. But as soon as a promoter talks about matching Dempsey with somebody, the governors and boxing commission sound the fire alarm.

If it is legal for Lynch, Kilbane, Leonard, et al, to take on the easy marks, it is also perfectly right and proper for Dempsey to occasionally pick up a little money under false pretense.

If it is wrong for "Tiger Jack" to bathe a setup, the same rule should apply to other ring men.

Gene Delmont Gives Worcester the Laugh

As stated in this column Friday, Gene Delmont always doesn't fight at his best. The Memphis fight weight fails just short of championship class and spends a great deal of time touring the country, sometimes winning and sometimes losing. Gene has class and can usually make his opponent look good. He can miss a punch by the smallest fraction of an inch and also take a blow on the jaw without giving ground. He also has cultivated the art of pretend me is groggy and is able to fool even some of the wise fans. Delmont permitted George Lee of Worcester to beat him the other night.

The fans were wise to the act and gave Delmont the razz. He should have been thrown out of the ring.

Delmont should be given a vacation by New England promoters.

Another Idle Week for Boston Fistic Fans.

It is another open week in Boston boxing. Warm weather and the lack of suitable cards, caused the various promoters to decide not to attempt to stage a show. The Arena A. C. will be in the field next Monday night if Matchmaker Tom Goodwin can obtain a suitable attraction.

The present lull in the boxing game should be beneficial to the sport.

GRAND CIRCUIT AT POUGHKEEPSIE

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Aug. 21.—The Grand Circuit races will open here today and close Saturday. A long and interesting program has been arranged for the harness horses. Much interest has been exhibited in the meet because of the remarkably successful campaign of Tommy Murphy of this city.

Brown Battles Murphy

Freeport, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Billy Murphy, Staten Island featherweight, meets Mickey Brown of the East Side in the feature 12-round bout at the Freeport A. A. tonight. Young Angelo of Stamford, Conn., and Gabe Lewis of Syracuse clash in the 10-round semi-final bout.

Nothing equals Pippins value; clean, long filler

CHAMPIONSHIPS AT FRANKLIN FIELD

There will be more than 250 athletes compete in the New England A. A. A. U. championship meet to be held at Franklin Field next Sunday afternoon, according to Hugh McGrath, who is receiving the entries.

Billy Nolan

Among the big stars as large group from the Boston Athletic Association, members of the St. Alphonsus A. A., Dorchester Club and the Huria A. C. of Quincy and college stars from all over New England have entered.

For the first time women athletes will take part in the meet.

In the sprints will be found some of the most familiar faces to the track fans. Charles Carroll of Holy Cross will travel for the St. Alphonsus A. A., H. L. Smith of Tech will wear the Unicorn and we will Will Hayes of Notre Dame and Frank Kelly of Boston College. The B. A. A. has Jake Driscoll, Earl Dodger and more than likely Paul Herlihy in the quarter-mile run. Phil Dillon will run the big-yard races.

Among the leading hikers in the one-mile run will be Jimmy Connolly of Woburn and Georgetown captain; Arthur Kiley of North College fame, Edward Brooks of Georgetown, Cecil Leach of New Hampshire State and Gerald Fleming, K. P. Libby and R. W. Harwood of Dartmouth will try their turn at the pole vault.

UMPIRE FINED $26 FOR BALTIMORE ROW

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 21.—Umpire William McGowan of the Eastern League was fined $25 and costs today for his share in an incident at Oriole Park yesterday, in which the umpire and Harry McCurdy, first baseman of the Syracuse Club, and former University of Illinois football and baseball star, came to blows, after McCurdy had questioned a decision of the umpire.

McGowan said he did not know that McCurdy was under arrest when he struck him. McCurdy and Pitcher Walter Stewart, another player involved in the affair, failed to appear in court and forfeited their collateral.

OHIO MAYOR PUTS BAN ON BOXING

Youngstown, O., Aug. 21.—Before leaving on a two-weeks' vacation Mayor W. G. Reese announced that the ban is on professional boxing here. He placed the lid on after a show last Wednesday between Jimmy Jones, local welterweight, and Marty Cross of New York, but after a conference with the local boxing commission lifted it. Tendays he declared he had reconsidered his latest decision and will not permit boxing.

YANKEE GIRLS SMASH TWO RECORDS IN GREAT PARIS MEET

AMERICANS FINISH IN SECOND PLACE

Paris, Aug. 21 (By the Associated Press).—English women athletes won the first international Olympiad track meet over competitors from the United States, France, Switzerland and Czecho-Slovakia. The American team was second, France third, Czecho-Slovakia fourth, and Switzerland fifth. The point scores were: England, 50; United States, 31; France, 29; Czecho-Slovakia, 13, and Switzerland, 8.

A large crowd gathered at Pershing stadium to witness the contests. The American team was leading in the point score when half the events had been finished. Weakness in the sprints was responsible for the failure of the Yanks to get more points. Lucile Godbold of South Carolina, and Curtis Nelson, Newark, N. J., won the star performances for the American team.

The former established a world record in the shot put at 29 meters and 22 centimeters and Miss Schuster ran the 100-yard hurdles in the record time of 14 2-5 seconds.

Other records established during the meet were by Miss Mejsnikova, Czecho-Slovakia, in the 50 yard dash of 7 2-5 seconds and by the same girl in the 100 yard dash in 12 4-5 seconds, and Miss Godbold, 11 2-5 seconds, although the final in the event was won in 12 seconds flat, the 1,000 metres run in 3 minutes 11 seconds by Miss Rieard, France and the 440 yard relay team in 51 4-5 seconds, made by the British team.

American Protest in Relay Race Mixup

The American relay team which finished second, was declared disqualified by the officials and placed fourth because it was held that the man relay team interfered with the French team at the third relay while the French team was running to second place.

In this the Stewart of New Haven (Conn.) High School American team has protested officially with the view to a rehearing of the matter against the ruling of the judges.

It is claimed that the American team should not be penalized for this interference as the rules governing the running of the relay races state that a different set of rules apply to the second, third and fourth men of the relay teams. Under these rules, it is claimed, Watkins, the American third man, had the right of way on the track and that Stewart, the fourth man, was entitled to the baton at the point where he received it.

The protest will be heard by the international committee of the games.

ST. WILLIAMS HAND FELLSMERES SHUTOUT

The St. Williams Catholic club of Dorchester whitewashed the Fellsmere Catholic club of Malden at Eustis Hill, 4 to 0, getting sweet revenge for the hard defeat of a few weeks ago. "Todo" Welch was in fine form, holding the Malden team hitless up to the eighth frame when Healy caught after two out. O'Meara scored another hit in the final frame.

Johnny Shea of Boston College High School also pitched a grand game, striking out fifteen, but his support cracked in the pinches. O'Brien and "Todo" accounted for four of the five hits made off Shea, each getting a triple and a single.

NORTH CAMBRIDGE WALLOPS MEDFORD

Some 15,000 fans saw North Cambridge stand Medford City Team on their heads at Russell Field. The final score was 6 to 2.

DOUGLAS WANTS TO SQUARE HIMSELF

By ARTHUR ROBINSON.

New York, Aug. 21.—Acting on the belief that Leslie Mann, the St. Louis outfielder, did not receive the famous "fishing letter" sent to him in Boston by "Shuffling" Phil Douglas, as intimated by denials made by Mann in St. Louis, Douglas, through an attorney, has taken steps to institute an inquiry to determine whether agents of organized baseball tampered with the mails and intercepted the letter.

Edward Lauterbach, the attorney, addressed a formal request to Judge Landis, high commissioner of baseball, for a hearing and reopening of the case. In his letter Lauterbach expressed the opinion, based upon facts and information in his possession, that Judge Landis had not been fully informed of all the details leading up to Douglas' expulsion, and that because of this and other developments Douglas was entitled to a hearing.

"There is no doubt," the attorney wrote, "that you are desirous of punishing all those who are guilty of any wrong doing, but I feel assured that you are equally desirous of giving the accused person a fair opportunity to be heard. I will await your reply before doing anything further in the matter."

Lauterbach said Douglas had received several offers to pitch for independent teams.

Lauterbach Says That Discrepancies Have Developed

Supplementing his request for a hearing before Judge Landis, Lauterbach gave the following statement.

"Certain discrepancies between Douglas' story and statements McGraw and Mann have made have developed.

"The public, as trustee of the national game, has full right to the exact facts and all the facts, and through Judge Landis Douglas would submit his case to this higher court of appeal.

"The fact that Douglas twice telephoned to Mann in Boston to ask Mann to destroy the 'fishing letter' is evidence of his desire to play fair. He had made a terrible mistake, but he finally realized it, and before the letter had reached Boston he wanted to have it destroyed. Mann had not received the letter when Douglas spoke to him on the phone and asked him to tear it up, but because Mann did not do this the present situation developed.

Neither Mann Nor McGraw Is to Be Condemned

"Mann is not to be condemned. We can see his position. He had to protect himself. McGraw had to protect himself. Judge Landis had to protect the integrity of the game.

"But nobody advised or protected Douglas, and he was unable to do for himself. We could claim, perhaps, that the entire situation was founded upon him—that if he were not of his own making, but we are not especially concerned with that just now.

"What Douglas wants is an opportunity to square himself. He has never thrown a game. He has always played fair. He scorned a $15,000 bribe last year. He wants to come before the public and ask to be understood, and to be forgiven pending the trial to which he wants to submit.

"The pennant race has about a month to go. Douglas will promise to win the pennant for the Giants if given the opportunity. Considering the circumstances which prevailed during the 'fishing letter,' he is entitled to that opportunity.

BABE GETS TWO HOMERS AND HAS 26

By Universal Service.

New York, Aug. 21.—Babe Ruth knocked out No. 25 and No. 26 today, the first of the two in the first inning and into the bleachers for the longest drive he had made this year.

His second homer in the ninth won the game, as two were on and the White Sox were leading, 5 to 4.

It caused a demonstration that few have seen before.

A gleaming cloud of straw hats came rolling out of the stands as the ball fell into the bleachers, and a tremendous cheer exploded in the throats of the crowd.

Miller Huggins, the Bitle Yankee manager, danced. The Babe raced around the bases with a flock of fans at his heels. At the plate he ran into a barricade of joyous human beings.

It was necessary for policemen to clear his way to the plate. After that the police and the fans were helpless. Up went the Babe and on the shoulders of the happy fans he rode to the clubhouse.

AMATEUR-PRO GOLF TOURNAMENT OPENS

Harry Bowler and Francis Oulmet, Charley Burgess and Jesse Guildford, John Cowan and Charles Skehens, Tom Mahan and William McPhail, Willie Ogg and Billy Whitworth, Stuart Sanderson and D. K. South Medford All Stars challenge the Chelsea Progress Club, East Boston Free, Alumnia Council, Knights of Columbus, Bunker Hill K. of C., or any other semi-pro club. Teams desiring games should get in touch with Manager J Mundill. Call Myrtle 2259-M.

DORCHESTER WANDERERS

The Dorchester Wanderers defy any club in the thirteen-fourteen year-old class. Teams wishing to play may write to Maurice O'Shea, No. 71 Sydney street, Dorchester.

SOMERVILLE EAGLES.

Somerville Eagles, a sixteen-year-old, uniformed team and claimants of the intercity title, challenge the Burgess Boys' Club of Dedham, Norwood Tigers, St. Ann's of Readville, Paine Newsboys and the Crystal A. C. of Newton. The Eagles have won seventeen games out of nineteen played. Managers of the above teams should communicate with Thomas O'Brien, No. 472 Medford street, Somerville, or telephone Somerville 343-W about 6 p. m.

BOSTON LODGE OF MOOSE

The team representing Boston Lodge No. 36, B. P. O. E. has been strengthened by the addition of Ballanor, O'Connell, Cuppo and Gorman. This team is without a game for August 27 and a few other dates. Managers desiring a first-class attraction communicate with Robert H. Caron, No. 147 Worcester street, Boston; tel. Back Bay 4698.

SS. PETER & PAUL'S.

Owing to a cancellation, the St. Peter and St. Paul A. A. would like to arrange a game for Sunday either at or away from home with the fastest amateur team in the State. Telephone Neal Curtain, South Boston 1227-M between 5 30 and 8 p. m.

ROXBURY ROVERS

CURLEY A. C.

The Curley A. C. of Roxbury, which claim the ten or eleven year year-old championship of Boston, desire games with any ten or eleven year-old teams in the State.

TWO GAMES FOR TWILIGHT LEAGUE

There are two bang-up attractions in the Greater Boston Twilight League tonight. One will take place at the John W. Murphy Playgrounds, Jamaica Plain, when the St. Andrews A. A. will entertain the Malden Knights of Columbus. The other game will have the Dorchester Baseball Club crossing bats with the St. Joseph's Catholic Association at Lincoln Park, Somerville.

The big game will be out at the Jamaica Plain ball yard when the Forest Hills nine battles the Malden Knights. This should make a slashing good contest as the Key Boy team is going fast and the Saints are tied for first place with the Cornet All Stars of Lynn.

Should the Maldenites defeat the Saints, which is possible, the Shoe City nine will land on top of the ladder and the Forest Hills aggregation will take to the toboggan.

Manager Jim Flanagan of the Malden Knights will use his best team in this game as he is more than anxious to win the tussle. Although Jim has a wonderful team he has been biting the bumps more or less all season and is now due for a good break.

Murphy's and Dailey's Dorchester Club must go out to Somerville to meet the St. Joe's. If the Saints put up the same brand of baseball as they displayed at Ronan Park last week against Dorchester, Somerville will win. Victory for the home club will make a hit. Ada Hart will pitch for the Dorchester Club.

Desert Love

By JOAN CONQUEST

She trusted herself with a Sheik in the lonely desert—

WOULD YOU?

Jill Carden, a beautiful and daring young English girl, brought up in a conventional home, burns her bridges behind her and lives in an oasis, far from her own race, for the love of an Arab chief. She was seventeen, motherless and much sought after by reason of her great wealth, which, however, disappeared when her father's will was read. After getting a position as traveling companion, she finds herself at Suez. She gets her first glimpse of Hahmed, the Camel King, and tosses a coin to decide whether she shall speak to him or go back to England. It falls heads and she is committed to the Sheik and the desert. The caravan starts for the oasis, with Jill riding a camel.

"Allah!" Whispered the Man, as He Dried Each Little Foot.

THERE was a gurgling sound as water ran from a skin into a brass pot which hung from a hook on the tripod, and in a few minutes the water began to bubble furiously, as the fire, leaping and falling, cast giant shadows on the Arab's flowing robes.

Small boxes were opened, and the contents laid on plates: sandwiches, cakes, sweetmeats, fruit, and wine, red and white, in skins, poured into empty earthenware jugs in which to cool it. Small cups of Egyptian coffee—a "Cona Machine" for the Western idea of coffee, and a box of cigarettes.

"If I had known you would be a bungered, I would have brought the wherewithal to make a repast of substance'"

"Oh, but it is all so topping" cried the girl, and there it stayed.

The slang words had suddenly struck her as foolish and silly, and out of place in a country where the syllables of words sounded sonorously, and time passed like a slow moving river with its banks unbroken with "hustle and bustle." And from that day, or rather night, Jill gave up slang, and one by one all the little dreary habits which rub the bloom off the Western maid

A stirring and unrealistic picture the two made as they lay on their cushions alone in the desert. The girl in her white dress, with its train somewhat crumpled, her white neck rising like a gleaming pillar from the low-cut blouse, the little curls rippling round the face which, under the moonlight and the stress of the past hours, showed white with shadow-encircled eyes, gazing at the man who rose and knelt with a towel of soft linen, and a basin of brass filled with water

Jill happened to be one of those lucky individuals who can with impunity wash their face anywhere, and at any time of the day, and look the better for it Neither had she to fear a futurist impression in vivid colors of Dorin rouge and blue pencilings mixed with liquid powder and arsine on her face after a sudden rain storm.

So she put her face right into the basin, lifted it sparkling with laughter and rainbow drops to burr it in the snowy cloth. Her sleeves she turned back, and ran the water up and down her arms

"And you must wash your feet woman, for so small are they, they must assuredly be fatigued"

And without hesitation the girl proffered her shoe to be unlaced, whilst without lifting her skirt, with a quick movement peculiar to the stepper which is hers, her last pair of real silk stockings in the infinitesimal girdle she wore in stead of the usual flurze distorting corset, peeled off the silken hose and put the prettiest foot in the world in fresh, painting, or marble into another basin of brass lit upon the ground, and also filled with water

"Allah!" whispered the man, as he dried each little foot so small, so exquisite in shading the arch of the instep, dyed as the sky at dawn, never in the most perfect Circassian have I seen feet so wonderful, glory be to Allah, whose prophet is Mohammed."

And then the Arab, filling another basin, moved to the far corner of the rug, where facing toward the East he made ablutions of his mouth and hands and feet, and raising his hands to heaven, gave praise to his God for the wonder of the day, and bowed himself in obeisance.

"I was returning thanks to Allah for you, O' Moon Flower," he said simply, and led her to the cloth of finest damask upon which the repast was spread. praising Allah anew as he poured the contents of the wine jars upon the sands when Jill announced that she only drank water.

Seated and cheered, the girl chatted merrily all through the al fresco meal, in her turn inwardly giving thanks for the Arab's perfect manners and knowledge of table methods, for in her heart she, particular to the point of becoming finicky about the usually so unpleasant process of eating, had looked forward with absolute horror to the moment when the man's fingers should close upon some succulent portion of a mess of pottage or chicken, and convey it to his mouth with charitable distribution of rice grains upon the beard.

Reassured, her laughter rang out sweetly when the absence of methylated spirit for the "Cona Machine" was discovered.

"And I would really rather have yours," said she, "for am I not to become an Eastern—and suddenly stopped, for looking up, she found the man gazing at her with eyes ablaze with love.

And once more a great silence fell between them, as they both sat staring wide-eyed over the desert, and up into the starry heavens.

Few very few of those who live in the West have had the privilege of being alone under the stars in the desert.

This does not mean riding out on a tourist track with dragoman and camel-driver, and retiring a few yards from the perpetual chatter to gaze at the heavens in what you imagine to be the approved style, to the accompaniment of correct gasps, after which, finding you have left your cigarettes behind, you look at your wrist watch and wait another five minutes, until you can with decency saunter back to your camel driver with the feeling of something quite well done, and the unuttered hope in your mind that everyone would not have gone to bed on your return.

Not it means, when wearied from long travel you call a halt, perhaps just before the dawn, when the very stars seem to commune with you.

Leaving your servants to pitch your tent, urge your camel to the distance when the clattering of pans, and the jar of inter-domestic feud shall not assail your hearing, then urge your camel to its knees, and set you down at a distance so that the pungent odor of the beast shall not assail your nostrils, and then removing little by little the outer covering of the worries and pin pricks which have made the passing of the day unbearable, give way to your soul, or second self, or whatever you call that which causes you to joy in the coming of the Spring, and to mourn when the fire refuses to heat but a portion of the room in Winter

For this is what happened to Jill, the English girl, as she sat on her cushions in the Egyptian desert, and has nothing to do with tableturning, or ten and six penny visions in Maida Vale, or whispering, or touchings in a convenient by darkened room; neither must you put it down to magnetism, or hypotism, or any of those "isms" which we, of a class between country and a machine made life, so benevolently tag on as terms descriptive to all that which we cannot label and place upon a museum shelf, or conveniently start by motor power

A long description on the Eastern's power of concentration, love of meditation and utter detachment from self would doubtlessly prove wearisome in the extreme, rather for a rough explanation thereof can help be got from Ich ky or lowly born native Without movement for hours he will sit as motionless as becomes his station, staring, as we should say, vacantly into space, in reality seeing and hearing what is which others, blinded by material enjoyment, can never hope to visualize or hear.

Jill afterwards tried to explain the outcome this, her first step in the meadows of meditation, which she took without help and without hesitation, and in which she has become so versed, to the mystification of those about her, who look upon woman as a bearer of children, a plaything for sunny hours, useful in time of rain, endowed with the brain of a pea hen, and as much soul as the priests see fit to mete out to her.

"Something had left me," Jill explained "My body seemed to be sitting on the cushions, and I could minutely describe the way Hahmed was sitting, and the exact shape of the shadow cast before him by the moon, which was sitting behind us. But inside I was quite empty, whilst all sorts of little things I had known so long, crept out and stole away into the desert. I was just a husk, with no more impatience or quick temper or restlessness, and I can remember wondering if I were likely to break in two or crumble into dust. I felt so thin. And then I heard all sorts of whisperings, just as though thousands of people were standing near me, trying to make me understand something, and a violet shadow suddenly appeared between Hahmed and myself, seeming to get deeper and deeper in color, and then get less and less, and as it lessened, so did my feeling of being a mere husk leave me, until at last, when it had all gone, I felt—well full is the only way to put it, and my heart was thudding, and the blood pounding in my head, and well—that's all"

Very indefinite and very unsatisfactory, and of which the whispering can easily be put down to the snuffling of the camels, the passing of the faint breeze, or the intakes of the Arab's breath, or the purple shadow to the folds of the black cloak. For the effect of fatigue, excitement, as I strong Egyptian coffee upon the nerves of a Western maid requires Pkey to turn the buzzing of a fly into the flight of an aeroplane, or the dripping of a tap into the roar of a Niagara.

So that as it may, the Arab made no sound or movement when with a low cry the girl sprang suddenly to her feet, and with both hands upraised although she knew it not, turned towards the direction in which Mecca lay.

For a full minute she stood absolutely motionless, then gently moving towards the man, who had risen and was standing behind her she put out her hand, saying softly, "Behold! I am ready to come with thee."

It was close upon dawn when the two figures suddenly and silently emerged from the tree shadows in which they had been hiding for some considerable time.

Very simple and harmless they looked too, the taller one in spotless galabeah and red fez, his smallpox pitted face softened by the light of the dying moon, the other, a mere bundle of clothes with the yashmak covering all except the eyes, dragging back from the hand which pulled her ruthlessly up to the door of a house conspicuous by its length of wall unbroken by windows

The faintest sound of music from somewhere about the immense building sounded as out of place at that hour as would a boy's shrill whistling in the middle of High Mass, but unperturbed thereby, the pitted-face man knocked gently three times upon the door, vehemently upbraiding the while his shrinking and protesting companion, who tugged still more forcibly at the restraining hand.

"Behold, art thou the daughter of ungrateful parents and not fit to be honoured by the great lord who awaits thee. Raise thy voice in protest, speak but one word, and thy back shall resemble the red pattern upon thy raiment, which has cost much hard toil to provide for thee"

The female figure suddenly sank back in all humility at the feet of the upbraider, as unperceived—maybe—by both, a small portion of the door above their heads slipped noiselessly back to show a gleaming eye glued to the little grille, taking in the scene beneath it

Unperceived or not, the elder man, taking a deep breath, continued in a slightly raised tone to administer a admonition

"Comely art thou, and young, and good is the price paid for thee, and may he who has purchased thee be not annoyed at that in which I bring thee, for in truth was thy mother against thy flight from the nest, being not awake to the advantages of the new bough upon which thou wouldst come to rest—therefore was I forced to bring thee by stealth. Patience—"

The gentle voice stopped suddenly as the door was thrown open by a much armed individual, who angrily demanded the meaning of the disturbance

"The peace of Allah be upon thee and upon this house, into which, by the order of thy master, O! brother, I bring a flower which he has deigned to pluck from within the city. Comely is she, and gifted in music and the dance, but young, is affrighted at the honor before her. I——"

Here the armed individual broke in ruthlessly upon the paean of praise, drawing a most gleaming and curved weapon from somewhere about his huge person

"Begone, disturbers of the peace," he ejaculated with the difficulty natural to one who has had his tongue split. "My master awaits a flower in truth, being even now o'ercome in sleep in the waiting, but the flower will show a warrant the which will pass her through this door of which I am the guardian

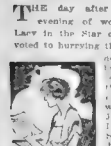
WHEN A GIRL MARRIES—BY ANN LISLE



THE day after my pleasant evening of work with Mr Lacy in the Star office was devoted to hurrying through all the details of the business I could conceive I felt that I wasn't entitled to my week-end at Bridge's unless I had earned it So I worked hard and I fell behind, and I didn't get time to start a single thing except my work and its success I hoped to make of it

I dined with Phoebe and Neal True to his policy of avoiding family gatherings which might make Phoebe conscious of the fact that the member of her family she most wants to see isn't willing to see her. Neal had invited Carlotta to be with us. But at the last moment, just as we were ready to start for Neal's apartment, Pat telephoned. After a talk with him Carlotta came to me with a terse explanation that she must meet Pat for a business conference

I saw she'd thought quickly and kindly with no motive except to spare Phoebe So I accepted her decision and drove off alone to Neal's former bachelor apartment, which had been turned into their honeymoon nest.

The two kiddies greeted me with the utmost pride in their little home and the fact that Phoebe had prepared the dinner. Carlotta's explanation of "important business wasn't questioned. Phoebe said she'd think that she'd miss Carlotta, but that it was sort of fun to be just "family" for once Neal added

"As long as C. Sturges is on his ness for the firm we should worry. We can use our share of the shekels she hauls in. She's earning our way toward the little flivver we aspire to own. If we had it we'd take you off to the country for the week-end. By Heck! Why shouldn't we go any how, girls"

I have an engagement," I stammered lamely

As I said it, I felt that I'd expected this all along. It seemed that I'd known this must happen from the minute Virginia asked me for the week-end. Facing the minute when I must see Phoebe's little pansy face grow wistful and twisted with the hurt she'd try to hide, I knew I'd never have the courage to invite that moment. I made up my mind to lie—to say Tony was giving a house-party—to say I was going to Mason Towers. I fairly scrambled around in my mind for something which would do as well as the truth that I couldn't tell

"Got a date? All right, Babbs, we'll have to plan something for the first week-end you're free," Neal said carelessly

I'm afraid I grasped—visibly—with the relief of it. I'd forgotten that Neal's good taste and delicacy are unfailing. He's only a kid to me—but he acts like a charming, chivalrous man. Again I found my mind forming a comparison between my brother and Ralph Lacy

The supper was delicious We had the jolliest and coziest kind of a time all through the meal Then we carried our high spirits into the task of clearing the table and washing the dishes Phoebe was determined that Neal should not do a bit of her work Neal was equally determined that Phoebe should wear herself out for him It was all so sweet and loving and devoted that it did two diametrically opposite things to my heart

It hardened my heart strings with loneliness for Jim and was tenderness and love for Tom, him.

I set my heart to singing with joy that my Neal and little Phoebe have found such beautiful love.

Unbelievably quickly it was plan and tel phoned a little before nine. Neal gave us the message ruefully

I'm needed at a business conference, Carlotta says she couldn't close the deal that Neal her from the dinner When C. Sturges sends an S. O. S. it's not to be ignored. That girl's big enough and brave enough to see anything through that any mortal would tackle. So Neal and forgive me—

"Listen to the conceit of him!" I cried, turning to Phoebe. "He acts as if you and I had never spent a fairly endurable evening together and without him"

Phoebe ran to Neal with the sweet shyness that is part of her and put into the adoring look she gave him a hint of how she'd miss him. Then, with her hand in his, she turned to me graciously with the Harrison poise that is also part of her equipment.

"Anne and I have a lot to say to each other. An evening with her is the one thing that could make up to me for an evening without you, dear," she said.

Neal kissed her and called her a cute little kitten-girl. But after Neal had given me one of his bear hugs and had breezed out of the place in his most boyish fashion, Phoebe turned to me purposely—all woman.

"There are a lot of things for us to talk over. Let's get comfortable and see how many problems we can resolve this evening—shall we, Anne?"

Careless Shampooing Spoils the Hair "Use Mulsified"

Soap should be used very carefully if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use

Simply moisten a teaspoonful of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water is sufficient to cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly, simply douse the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to arrange.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any pharmacy. A few ounces will suffice for several months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified

Etiquette Problem Answer

Don't presume on hospitality for your dog. He may be most unwelcome.

Etiquette Problem

What's Wrong Here?

Answer elsewhere on this page.

Correct English

1—Improve the sentence, "The visitor moves in an uproar that is heard no place else on earth."

2—Are "I are" and "Aren't I" correct English, or colloquialisms peculiar to English?

3—What is the meaning of the Latin words in "He droned on ad infinitum"? How is ad infinitum pronounced?

ANSWERS.

1—Say "The visitor moves in an uproar that is heard nowhere else"

2—The correct negative abbreviation of the first person singular is, "I'm not," not "I aren't" The lack of an interrogative negative has caused "aren't I?" to creep into the language, although it is not, of course, correct.

3—Ad infinitum, pronounced "ad in-fi ni tum," means "to infinity," "endless"

Precautionary Investigation

With a sentimental leaning towards the days of his own youth, a certain business man sent his son to college to see how he'd himself been educated. On arriving at the place of much knowl edge the young man began to make a few inquiries. "I should like to see my father's record," said he to the head of the college. "He was here in Eighteen Hundred and Ninety." "I shall be very pleased to show you the record," was the reply. "But have you any special reason for consulting it" "Well," replied the youth frankly, "when I left home Dad told me not to disgrace his record, and I only want to know how far I can go."

"Mary"

ROMANCE OF A BOSTON BUSINESS GIRL

By Elenore Meherin

Start This New Story Today

MARY KELLY wins the post of private secretary to HALL DAWSON, a dynamic promoter with offices in Water street. She instinctively fears him. After the conclusion of a big deal he calls her his mascot and gives her a check for $100, which she accepts with misgivings. Reassured by Dawson, however, she plunges into her wonderful dreaming of the day she will be his partner. The next deal concluded, she expects another bonus check, but finds it is for only $30. While she is debating whether she will resign, MRS. HALL DAWSON enters and tries to find out Mary's regard for her employer. Mary's adviser is her sister, JUNE. Mary goes to see the parade of the returning Yankee Division and meets PAT SULLIVAN, her childhood sweetheart. Now go on with the story.

THREE soldiers were coming toward us. The one in the centre too was tall—a lieutenant. I wanted to see his face. They stopped right next to us.

"Dance, Mary?" Bill repeated.

I took his arm. I had seen the face. It wasn't Pat's.

We danced gayly down the room, humming the tantalizing strains of "Madelon," mingling with the hundreds of dancers. Everywhere were girls smiling gayly, confidentedly into the faces of the boys that had come home to them that morning. I envied them.

Suddenly I caught sight of a girl whirling in the arms of a tall lieutenant.

"Dance over that way, Bill! Not so crowded. Quick. Let's double time."

"Oh Bill—they're gone!"

"Why? What's the matter, Mary?"

"Nothing. I thought I saw a friend of mine. I wanted to catch up with them."

Was it he? I lost interest in searching. I wanted to go home—to be alone.

It was after midnight when I raised the window of our room. I knelt down and let the sweet air cool my face. I prayed. I prayed that he might think of me—might love me.

"You're working too hard, darling. You're losing your color." Ma looked at me in that tender, ana ous way of hers when I came in one evening early in May. "Is that man going to give you a raise?" She always spoke of Dawson as "that man," as though he were a villain unworthy of a title.

"Won't know till pay day, ma. Guess I'll get it."

"You should get it. But never mind, darling; next year we'll take a vacation."

"I wouldn't work so hard, Mary. Take it a bit easy, dear. You're staying home too much lately. You and Gracie go to a movie tonight."

"Too tired, ma; I'd rather read."

I took up my book and sat down for another evening of waiting. I did not tell ma it was waiting, hoping, not working, that tired me. What would she have said if she thought I was thinking of a man I had only seen once; a man who had carelessly kissed me on the street? Would she have thought it shameless? Did any other girl ever do such a thing?

I wondered about it when I walked out during the noon hour. The streets were thronged with the returned soldiers. They looked so tanned, so glad to be home, so friendly. Was any other girl searching for a face among these uniforms?

Why should I look for him? We lived in the same old flat he had so often visited as a little fellow. We had a telephone. If he were thinking of me, he could easily let me know.

That's the last time. I thought, as I came back to the office one noontime.

A red rose, half bud, half flower, lay across the carriage of my typewriter—crimson jacqueminot. I picked it up and ran my fingers over the silky leaves.

"How beautiful." I thought, and without considering who had left it there or where it came from I was about to put it in my belt when the door opened. Instinctively I raised my hand and tossed the flower through the window.

"I wonder must have left it." I thought hurriedly.

I looked down after it, pretending not to hear the footsteps Dawson's voice, rich, upbraiding, laughing, taunted me.

"Well, of all the gall, you witch, Mary!"

"What do you mean throwing that $10 roses out the window?"

"It fell out," I answered.

"Don't lie to me, girlie. I saw you hurling it forth. Thought you liked flowers. Picked that specially for you out of my own garden."

"Dance, Mary?" Bill repeated

I didn't answer, because I knew he would resent my thoughts. I wanted to say, "If you know so well what I like, give it to me. I'd like a raise. I'd like the money I've earned."

But it would only have infuriated him. So often I've seen men throw out bait, breezy, informal, deliberately courting a flippant rejoinder, and when they got it I've seen them grow red with anger. They become furious if a girl makes the mistake of taking them at their word.

Dawson expected no answer from me.

"What day is this, Mary?"

"Wednesday."

"Pay day." He handed me a check. "Open it. Want to see how you like it."

It was for $65, a raise of $20 a month; a little more than I expected, less, I was sure, than I was worth.

"Thanks, Mr Dawson." I folded it and slipped it in my pocket.

"You're the cool customer, Mary. Don't thrill you much." He expected to see me gasp; to act so that he might get his money's worth out of the deal. "What's the matter? Ain't it enough? By golly, that's a good raise; $130 a month's a bully salary for a girl."

"For a girl?" I echoed.

"It may be a good salary, Mr Dawson, but it doesn't take you very far when shoes are $12.00 a pair."

"I told you Mary, a girl can't get very far on a salary, anyway. It's a don's life. You want money, Mary? The world is full of it for a girl like you."

I reached for the telephone book. I think I was going to fire it at him. The string caught. Then his voice, cool, business-like, arrested me.

"You're the exception, Mary! You're worth a salary.

"If I don't have to work for you forever," I thought. The face that was constantly before my mind smiled at me. I felt protected.

How foolish we are to run after our fate as though we could indeed a mer to hurry or change for us; as though we could alter her purpose. She will turn to us when she is ready, and though we wear ourselves out in pursuit, she will wait us not one moment soo

"I've been expecting a 'phone call, ma," I said that night at dinner. "Did anyone rang me up in the last few days?"

"Gracie, with her mouth full of r e pudding, reaped on the table with her spoon, nodding and chewing at the same time.

"I saw you on nodding and chewing, and when she had finally cleared of the pudding answered as blandly as though it were a matter of no importance.

"He rang you up, Mary, two times."

"When, who, why didn't you tell me?"

Gracie, frightened at the angry tone, looked over to ma, "Don't need to get mad, do you. I didn't mean to forget, did I?"

"That's all right, Gracie." I knew she wouldn't talk if I lost my temper. "I don't care a bit. Who was it, honey? What did they say?"

"He said his name was Pat, and he'd ring up again." She was busy picking out the raisins and shoving them to the side of her dish. Ma saw through the indifference I tried to assume.

"Hurry up and tell Mary," she said impatiently. "Who called up. Why didn't you write it down?"

"I did. I wrote down the number. He said for you to call up."

"Do you remember the number, Gracie?" She thought a moment.

"I ain't sure. I know there was a five in it. Maybe it was Haymarket 4185. I think that's it. Ain't mad, are you, Mary?"

"Alright, Gracie. It doesn't matter."

I got up and went to my room. "That's the end of it." I pressed my face against the curtain. "He said for me to ring up. I'll never hear from him again!"

The days that followed that night at dinner when Grace told me about the 'phone calls were the most colorless in my life. The tang, the sparkle, was gone, everything was flat and sordid to me. And although I laughed with Madie and Scotty and chatted with Iris, I felt as though my heart had been lifted out, leaving nothing but aching emptiness. I would never feel anything joyous again.

There was nothing but work for me, and I had plenty of it in the next few weeks. They were weeks of cruelty and disillusion.

Iris and I were eating lunch together in the candy store where they served baked ham sandwiches with country gravy and coffee for 30 cents. Iris cut her bread slowly, looked up at me and started to talk, then looked down again.

It always made me sad to talk to Iris, there was something so childlike and helpless in her persistent faith. She had received only hardship and toil from life and yet she was so pathetically eager to believe the best.

But I felt guilty consoling her. There was no future of happiness for Iris and I knew it. She bothered Dawson; he had several times mentioned a new bookkeeper. He was frightened with the mistakes she made. Yet it was the constant increase of responsibility that had unnerved her. When she had been the place there were few books to keep. With every venture her work became more complicated. She was rushed, harried, nagged at. She lost her grip under the strain.

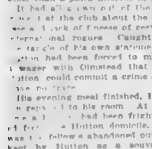
DAILY SHORT STORY

THE BURGLAR

By J. B. Ryan.



NEVER before had James, the valet, seen his master in such good spirits. And there was reason why his master was able to sit down to his table with more than his customary appetite. For the first time since he had lost his bonds, Hutton illustrious financier, had something other than a jaded interest in life. He had a good deal to do with the fact that which about the face was a look of finesse of certain financial rogues. Caught in the act of robbing his own safe, Hutton had been forced to make a wager with Olmstead that he, Hutton could commit a crime and get away with it.

His evening meal finished, Hutton repaired to his room. At one time he had been frightened of Hutton domicile. It was to follows abandoned outfit by Hutton as a souvenir which is now examined. The kit was one of exquisite workmanship, with tools with which, Hutton, one could open anything from a can of sardines to the Pearl Safes. They would be of invaluable aid in the spectacular expedition.

The policeman rapped his club sharply against the sidewalk, and in answer to the signal came three other policemen and eight curious citizens, who were instantly deputized by the officer in charge.

"Three of you come into the house with me," said he. "The rest of you guard the doors and windows."

With an ease that made him feel that he had missed his calling, Hutton opened the safe. It was money he wanted, and as he delved further into the safe two figures stole into the room and approached the unsuspecting Hutton as silently, as ominously as Death.

And yet he must have heard them, for of a sudden he raised his head and saw the approaching menace. Darting under their outstretching hands, he sprang across the room and through a doorway, slamming behind him the door, let ewhich his impetuous pursuers crashed.

In the bal Hutton collided with the third man, and drove a hard fist to the fellow's jaw.

Down the dimly lighted hall he sped to the front door. Locked! And on the porch—footsteps! Trapped! Wildly Hutton glanced about, then like a hunted animal he sprang up the stairs leading to the upper part of the house just as his pursuers, their numbers strengthened by the aroused servants of the establishment, swept into the hall.

Hutton darted into the first room in sight, a, slammed the door and bolted it. That would hold his pursuers until he had escaped via the window.

But at the window he sprang back in dismay. Down on the lawn, looking up at him, was—a policeman!

IN FRANTIC HASTE.

Hopelessly he glanced about, then gasped in amazement. The moon had come out from hiding, and its light flooded the room, rendering every object very distinct.

After assuring himself that he was the victim of no hallucination, Hutton sprang to the wardrobe, eager to take advantage of his discovery. He thrust his silk mask into the pocket of a coat, jerked out a pair of pajamas, which he exchanged for the clothes he wore, in frantic haste.

Then after ruffling the bed to give it the appearance of having been slept in, he unlocked the door and confronted his pursuers.

At sight of him the crowd in the hall fell back.

"What does this mean?" demanded Hutton angrily. "What do you mean by pounding on my door and waking me up? James, explain!"

"A robber, sir!" stammered the valet. "We chased him upstairs—we thought he ran into your room."

"In here?" said Hutton in surprise. "Why—no—but, come on, let's search!"

"That burglar who escaped last night, sir, left his tools beside the safe. What shall I do with them?"

"Leave them there, James," said Hutton, carefully tapping a boiled egg. The egg was softboiled, and if he was not careful he might spill its contents upon the tablecloth. "I will keep them for a souvenir."

"This makes two sets you have now, sir."

"Yes, James, this makes two."

Poetic Justice

Loxley, the poet, was ignorant
Loxley, the poet, was indigent.
His rich brain seems good,
that they were the result of divine inspiration, he was almost certain.
But, Loxley, editor of a popular weekly had rejected several of them, giving no reason for his action.

The two met at a literary dinner party, and revenge was smouldering in the poet's breast. He leaned across the table and said:

"I saw a good thing in that paper of yours the other day."

"Yes. What was it?" the editor beamed.

"A pound of fish," said Loxley, beaming balefully back.

Such an aerial gives good results on wave lengths below 400 meters, and is especially adapted for portable sets

A NEW aerial is being tested by the Bureau of Standards is so easy of construction that many radio amateurs are "trying it out" at home.

The aerial consists simply of two pieces of wire screening, protected by copper, held a few feet apart by an insulated support. This is the same idea as the counterpoise aerial which is occasionally used on aeroplanes and elsewhere.

Tests have shown that this type of aerial gives very good results at wave lengths below 400 meters. At higher wave lengths, it must be correspondingly larger, and it is therefore more cumbersome than a loop antenna. It is not directional, like the loop.

The design of this type of aerial, according to J. C. Wamer of the Bureau of Standards, is that of keeping the effective resistance as low as possible. By taking care to keep dielectric losses low, it is possible to reduce the effective resistance lower than can be obtained by a loop or ordinary elevated aerial.

The chief advantages of it is its easy portability and erection, which makes it especially adaptable for military purposes and on aeroplanes. It may be used for transmitting as well as receiving.

A POPULAR ROMPER SUIT

3855. Children usually look happiest when comfortably dressed for play, and surely the bloomer suit has the right lines for comfort and convenience. This model has a pocket and is easy to develop. The rompers may be worn without the smock. Percale with stitching in bees shown. One could have chambray, or pin checked gingham. The sleeve may be finished in wrist or elbow length.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. A 4-year size requires 2¾ yards of 32-inch material.

MOVIE WORLD NEWS AND GOSSIP

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

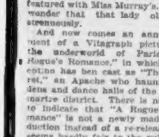
As the "Little Nelly Kelly" vehicle may at the Tremont Theatre, "Something ought to be done" Elsie Ridolph Valentine has scored such a hit in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," all his old pictures have been dug out of the cellars of the producers who want to profit by his present standing.

A few weeks ago we had an old Universal release in which Mae Murray had been starred, "The Dubbous Little Devil," or some such thing. Valentine had a role in the film and it was shown after two years simply on the strength of V ualtino's name, which was featured with Miss Murray's. Small wonder that that lady objected strenuously.

And now comes an announcement of a Vitagraph picture of the underworld of Paris, "A Rogue's Romance," in which Valentino has been cast as "The Fence." An Apache who haunts the dens and dance halls of the Montmartre district. There is nothing to indicate that "A Rogue's Romance" is not a newly made production instead of a re-release. It seems hardly fair to the public to foist old films on them as new ones.

NEXT MAYO FILM.

FRANK MAYO'S next production for Universal will be something of a family affair since Dagmar Godowsky (Mrs. Mayo) will have the "vamp" role, that of a South Sea belle. Louise Lorraine will have the ingenue role of this story, "The Altar Stairs," by G. B. Lancaster. Work on this production has already begun at Universal City.



Louise Lorraine.

AND SPEAKING OF UNIVERSAL.

THEIR fall season is well under way as far as that company is concerned. Von Stroheim is hard and, doubtless, expensively at work on "Merry-Go-Round"; Reginald Denny is filming a second series of H. C. Witwer's "Leather Pusher" stories; Harry Myers is making a serial of "Robinson Crusoe"; and Jack Mulhall has signed up for a series of Jack London's sea stories, "Tales of the Fish Patrol."

ROSE COGHLAN FILMS.

ROSE COGHLAN, who has recovered from the illness that was laid her low for a number of months, be is a prominent member of the company that is filming "The Secrets of Paris, adapted from Eugene Sue's "The Mysteries of Paris." Dolores Cassinelli and Walter James have the leads in the production, which is being sponsored by Charles C. Burr and Whitman Bennett.

ALMA RUBENS AGAIN.

THOSE who have been asking constantly for some months what has become of Alma Rubens will be interested in the news of the forthcoming Cosmopolitan feature, "The Valley of Silent Men," in which Miss Rubens has the feature role. This film is booked for next week at Loew's Orpheum, where it will have its world's premiere.

This story is laid in the Canadian Rockies and starts off with the mystery of the man who was found stranded with a bullet wound and of a woman's hair. That it has been written by James Oliver Curwood speaks for itself.

Alma Rubens.

Frank Borzage directed this production in the Rockies and has made a spectacular production. Miss Rubens is supported by Lew Cody, Joe King, Mario Majeroni, George Nash, J. W. Johnston and Chief Powderface of the Stoney tribe of Alberta Indians.

ROBERTSON SEVERS WITH LASKY.

NOW that we hear that John S. Robertson has broken off his connection with the Famous Players-Lasky Company, the question is what he will do. It will be, of course, a great loss to that organization, for Robertson's versatility "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," "Sentimental Tommy," and "Footlights," is of the sort that has caused many people to place him next to Griffith and Ingram in the directing field.

Real estate has recently finished directing Mary Pickford in "Tess," for which purpose he was loaned by Famous Players. Accordingly to those who have seen parts of the film in the studio projection room, will place another feather in the already crowded cap of Robertson. His plans for next year are as yet not made public.

HOT BOXES DELAY WELLESLEY TRAIN

Two hot boxes on the smoker of the 7:47 train from Wellesley on the Boston & Albany, caused a delay of thirty minutes at Riverside today. The smoker was finally uncoupled and left on a siding.

'GEORGES' TO COME BACK TO BOSTON

A large deal has just been consummated whereby the leases of the Collins Shoe Company and the Winchester Company, at Nos. 45-47 Bummer street, pass into possession of the Georges Clothing Corporation of New York city.

It will be remembered that this is the same Georges Clothing Institution that was for many years established in Boston. The concern has enjoyed a large measure of success in recent years and their plans for this new local establishment, which is part of their program of nation-wide expansion, promise a clothing store for men of this city that will be one of the show places of its kind in the community.

KEEP LOW PRICE POLICY.

In this connection, Mr. George Sultzuch, president of the Georges Clothing Corporation, said: "We disposed of our local store here as well as those in other cities four years ago because the prices of imported woolens soared to such unprecedented heights that we simply could not maintain our low price policy and satisfy our customers. Now that conditions are again normal, we are proceeding with our plans of expansion in Boston and other cities vigorously.

"We purpose the establishment of a Georges store in practically every city in New England as rapidly as suitable locations and desirable leases are obtained.

TO OPEN IN OCTOBER.

"Negotiations are also under way for leases of stores in Cleveland, Scranton, Rochester, Detroit, Pittsburgh and Uniontown. We operate the largest store of the kind in the world at No. 15 West Thirty-fourth street, New York, as well as other large and successful establishments in Newark, Philadelphia and Buffalo.

"We shall open our store in Boston early in October, as soon as extensive alterations are completed."

SKULL OF BOSTON FLYER FRACTURED

New York, Aug. 21.—Jack Marston of Boston and a man believed to be Edward Taylor of Texas were in Eastern Long Island Hospital today, suffering serious injuries received in an airplane accident. Both men are said to have fractured skulls. While descending in a heavy wind their plane went into a nose dive when 100 feet in the air and crashed to the ground on the estate of Mrs. Albert Delafield, near Greenport, L. I.

SHORT DRESSES STILL RULE IN REFORMATORY

Bedford, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Inmates of the State Reformatory for Women are not to have the skirts of their dresses lowered to conform to the new styles. The new one-piece dresses come within a foot of the ground and far longer than the old uniforms, but Major Amos P. Baker declared, after rejecting the petition of the inmates, that he was opposed to following the changes in fashion. Bobbed, the new garb was cheaper, he said.

Let Us Trade With Ireland

Boston Needs Business and Boston Has a Greater Per Cent. of Irish People Than Any Other American City

We should like to make a suggestion to Mayor Curley.

Ireland is just coming into the family of nations. Whatever her titular connection with the British Empire may be, the heart of Ireland is with America, and we ought to cultivate trade with her.

Under the present arrangements, Ireland's connection with the British Empire can be no longer used to suppress independent Irish trade. Before Ireland was forcibly dragged into English union she had developed independent industries which enabled her to support a population of nearly 9,000,000 people. After that, the British policy of suppressing Irish industries destroyed them so rapidly that in a few years scarcely any were left, and Ireland became a famine-stricken country not able to support an increasing population, not even able to support the population it had already acquired, but was compelled to send its sons and daughters to the uttermost parts of the world, chiefly to America, in such hordes that in less than two generations half of the population had melted away.

Now, however, the old Irish genius will begin to display itself and we can expect to see the dawn of an Irish industrial system, and Irish trade that is worth cultivating.

No nation in the world is more sentimental than the Irish, and trade does follow to a considerable extent the sentiment of the traders. Why should we not reap the benefit of the friendship which the Irish people have for America, where indeed the tie of blood is thicker than water, because there is more Irish blood in America than there is in Ireland today, and it is from America that came the funds which have given Ireland whatever she has gained of political and economic independence?

Why should we not now take advantage of the feeling of mutual friendship which exists between our two peoples, and why should we not in Boston especially seek to benefit by Irish trade? Boston needs all the business she can get if she is to hold her own, and in Boston reside a greater per cent. of the people of Irish blood than in any other city in America.

We also ought to develop trade with Russia. Most of the reports we hear that it is difficult to trade with Russia are nothing but the political propaganda of those who want to keep that trade to themselves and those who do not want American people to have any respect for Russia under its present form of government.

If Boston wants to develop her port, Boston must act largely through her political units to develop it. We suggest to the Mayor and the Governor that a committee be formed to consider what can be done in these directions.

Corset and Tariff

"Good in Evil," Perhaps

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

The new tariff is full of surprises, and one of them is this: The women of the United States, because of the tariff, will pay fifty-eight million dollars a year MORE for their corsets.

That's a good deal to pay for corsets altogether, to say nothing of an increase in costs. However, it will encourage American corsets—the best in the world.

Perhaps you feel like saying about corsets what Samuel Johnson said about the dull young lady playing the piano. Told that it was a very difficult piece, he said: "Sir, I wish it had been impossible."

Perhaps if corsets were IMPOSSIBLE, women on the whole would be better off. All they really need are supports, light and soft without any steels in them, before children are born. Such are made in America.

It is true that corsets are probably responsible for the fact that women suffer from consumption LESS than men. Consumption starts in the apices, the upper points of the lungs. Women are compelled to breathe up there, because corsets squeeze them lower down.

They Still Talk About 'War'

We Have Had Enough of That. Talk Carefully

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

The Southern Railway, through its president, Fairfax Harrison, says to the men: "If it means war, then let's have it now—not later."

If the striking men talked about "war," that would be called anarchy. Telegrams would be sent to the Attorney-General. Employers should leave talk of "war" to others.

The Southern Railway, as it happens, has been different from other roads in its fairness and justice in its attitude toward the men, in offering to take them back on their own terms—an offer which they refused, on the ground that the strike was nation-wide. But it is not wise for any railroad to talk about war. It is easy enough to have war, as the world has recently learned in Europe, and a little later in Russia.

In this country we ought to be able to get along with LAWS and JUSTICE. When we reach a point where we can't get along with law and justice, it will be a very sad day for those that own railroads and other valuable properties, and they should remember it in their talks.

Punish Railroad Wreckers

We hope that Governor Cox will persevere in his avowed determination to find those responsible for damaging railroad property. We do not know who they are, whom they represent, nor with whom they sympathize. As we have said before, they may be the men on strike, they may be their sympathizers, they may even represent the railroad executives, and they may be just evil-minded persons seeking to take advantage of the present situation to satisfy a degenerate lust for excitement and destructiveness.

But, whoever they are, and whomever and whatever they represent, let them be caught and punished.

Flapper Condemned

Editor Boston American:

The incidents surrounding the killing of Sarkistan at Methuen last week condemn the so-called flapper. There is no narrowmindedness in that statement. To think that a girl could encourage such a heinous crime, even under the influence of liquor, can hardly be imagined. This is not the first time that this type of girl has committed crime. Without some good women this world is doomed. Are these girls trying to ape the men by cutting their hair, wearing trousers, smoking and drinking? In the same paper I notice that on the first page are words which read: "Black Hand Murder," in large type. If as much publicity were given to this little flapper incident, people would realize that there is something wrong with these alleged charming little things and their harmless and peppy way of expressing themselves. England and United States

Editor Boston American:

I was highly amused by reading an article appearing in "The Voice of New England," written by a self-made historian by the name of B. M. Crowell of Charlestown. The author of that article is evidently English. I am of Irish extraction. I do not know whether these statements are deliberate lies or whether they are simply due to B. M. Crowell's ignorance of the subject.

The prize question he asks and answers incorrectly in his article is: "Did England interfere with this country when the great struggle between the North and South was at its height?" He answers "No." The correct answer is "Yes." England did interfere between the North and South during the Civil War. She practically allied herself with the South, not openly, but in a dirty, underhanded way, typical of many of England's doings, even to the present time.

England has interfered in Ireland's present turmoil by its usual underhanded methods by trying to make the struggle one of religion. Justice and right will inevitably win.

Misuse of Flag

Editor Boston American:

All honor to Catherine Drew, who had the grit and backbone to write to the Boston American protesting against the misuse of the American flag in the Bruga-Boland funeral parade in Boston on Sunday, August 13. Our country is America, and not greater Ireland, as Archbishop Hayes of New York stated at the time of the Union Club flag riot in New York city.

The founders of this republic and those who adhered to the cause of the American colonies in the revolution were mostly of English blood, although there were a few Scotch-Irish. The Roman Catholic Irish were almost nil. This country was founded by English Protestants and the descendants of the same do not intend to let America be ruled or governed by agents of a foreign potentiate.

English Justice and Ours

Editor Boston American:

Your editorial, under the above heading, in the Boston American is giving your readers a very wrong impression. I read the Boston American quite thoroughly every day and would have to believe your statement if I did not know differently. You say in "England if you have a just claim against a big railroad for $10 you can bring suit profitably, get judgment, get your money and have something left over. Can you imagine anyone doing that in the United States?"

In Massachusetts if you have a just claim against a big railroad you can bring suit profitably, get judgment, get your money and have the whole $10 left over, and Massachusetts is a part of the United States. That beats "English justice," as quoted in the editorial, to a frazzle. There is no doubt that lawyers and judges of America "have a great deal to learn from English justice," but in this particular I think the Boston American should give equal publicity to what can be done in Massachusetts much better than the item quoted of what can be done in England.

"THE ROMANCE OF THE BATTLEFIELDS"

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

A FREE advertisement, if somewhat belated, is herewith gladly given to the Battlefields Bureau, Ltd., of Piccadilly, London.

Yes, it is given with a grim gladness.

And the more grimly because we know that, because of the lateness of the season, this free advertisement cannot be really serviceable to the Battle Fields Bureau.

But please read for yourself this appeal for patronage, and then take the next boat — for Patagonia or the Arctic Circle; any spot save one made pathetically infamous by mankind's savagery in warring.

A recent number of one of our "swell" magazines, one almost exclusively read by the hopelessly well-to-do, sends you this about out of its advertising columns:

"Americans!—the Romance of the Battlefields awaits you no."

In the best take-it-for-granted manner of the astute publicity salesman, you are told that you are probably going over to England.

Of course, all really good Americans (i. e., of English stock or under English influence) make periodic trips, by boat or by imagination, to the "mother country." That lessens the expense account for British propaganda just so much.

As Josh Billings would say: "This is writ sarkastik."

To come back to our advertisement, you are advised in any case not to put off your visit to the scene of the great European struggle—"spots still much as the armies left them, but which the passing of a few years will alter beyond recognition."

Yes, by all means, let us all hurry over before merciful Nature and narcotic Time spread the beautifying mantle of forgetfulness over areas momentarily devastated by puny, murderous, suicidal man.

Hustle to Europe, you lukewarmy Americans, and let your blood boil as your vulgar, ghoulish curiosity feeds upon the ruins and the graves in the "well-remembered places over which the great conflict raged for years."

Recall there how eagerly the swarthy Senegambians, the wily Japanese, the cynical Chinese, and other "colored groups from the far South and from the farthest East, co-operated with England, France, Italy, Belgium and even America to delay democracy for the white portion of the still unhuman race.

Yes, you unappreciative Americans, rush over to that vast charnel house, and then be the more grateful that you are part of a people that has learned to love peace and to promote it by just relations with other peoples.

The Romance of the Battlefields, indeed!

The tearful tragedy! The maniac madness! The self-crucifixion of man!

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON CENTRIFUGAL FORCE

By Garrett P. Serviss

A MAN in New Hampshire is unable to see how an increase of seventeen times in the velocity of the earth's rotation could cause bodies on the equator to lose all weight, through the centrifugal force becoming equal to the force of gravity. As he has written twice about it and since others may find the same difficulty, I will explain the calculation as clearly as I can.

Now for the centrifugal force, which gave the earth its generous bolt-girth, and which would fling things from the equator like drops of water from a whirling grindstone, if the earth should start to rotating more than seventeen times faster. It is precisely the same force that makes looping the loop possible in amusement parks. In every case the problem is to destroy, or eliminate, the force of gravity by means of a counterbalancing force.

Let us borrow a little of the simplified language of the mathematicians. We will let C stand for centrifugal force, V for velocity, R for the radius of the earth —i. e., the distance from its surface to its centre, or, in the case of centrifugal force, the distance from any point on the surface perpendicularly down to the axis of the earth under that point. The force of gravity we will represent by G, meaning not any weight, but the acceleration of motion toward the earth's centre that gravity produces in one second of time. This is always, in round numbers, 32 feet. Then we must have the almost matchlessly useful quantity called Pi, and usually represented by the Greek letter of that name. The numerical value of Pi is about 3.14.

Now, the principles of physics give us this formula: C equals V2 (V squared), divided by R. But to apply it for our calculation we take it in a slightly altered shape, thus: C equals 4 Pi-square R divided by T2, in which T represents the time of each revolution of the earth expressed in seconds. For those who are curious enough to ask why this last equation equals the first, and why we use it instead of the first, I will just explain that V is equal to 2 Pi R (which is the mathematical expression for the circumference of a circle), divided by T, the time of rotation; and we want the formula in this shape because our object is to get an expression for the centrifugal force in terms of acceleration per second, which will enable us to compare it with gravity.

So, then, we first find the value of R, the earth's radius at the equator, which is 20,926,202 feet (I take Professor Young's value) and the value of T, which is 86,167 seconds, and then squaring, multiplying and dividing just as the formula tells us to do, we get as the final result the decimal 0.1113, which if you examine the terms of the formula, you will find to mean 0.1113 of a foot per second. In other words the acceleration produced by centrifugal force at the earth's equator, while the earth is rotating at its present speed (one turn in 24 hours), equals 0.1113 foot. Now, taking gravity in round numbers as 32 feet per second, we see that the centrifugal force is about one 283th part of gravity.

But, the first formula tells us that the centrifugal force varies with the square of the velocity, and 283 is the square of 17, from which we see that if the velocity of the earth's rotation should become 17 times greater, or one turn in 1 hour 24.7 minutes, the centrifugal force at the equator would just equal gravity, so that bodies there would lose all their weight. Here is the equation: 1-283th multiplied by 289 (17 squared) equals 1.

We are now dealing with the centrifugal force required to make a car on a vertical circular railroad loop the loop safely, we consider the velocity instead of the acceleration, and we have the formula: V2 (the speed of the car) equals G multiplied by r, the letter r in this case standing for the radius of the circular rail, while G, as before, represents gravity. Thus, suppose the radius were 25 feet, then G multiplied by r would be about 796, the square root of which is nearly 28.4, showing the velocity ought to be that number of feet per second theoretically, and considerably more in practice, in order that the car should not fall.

—Medbury Says—

Most of the Vamps Have Gone Into the Bootlegging Business This Year

Up to the present time, 1923 has been a bad year for vampires. Most of the vamps have gone into the bootlegging business and are making honest livings.

Another name for these women was "siren." They used to call them sirens because they blew in every dollar you had.

The majority of vampires have failed this year because a lot of them have tried to break the hearts of landlords, and any vamp who knows her business knows that a landlord hasn't got a heart. If she thinks they have, she just ought to rent an apartment from one of them.

Another reason these sirens are failing is because the wives are vamping their own husbands.

Why should a man go outside to get broke when he can be ruined in his own home?

A woman doesn't ask her husband for money any more. She just goes her hair up, puts on a tight-fitting dress and he begs her to take all he's got. She has to do this to hold his love.

Remember the honeymoon is always over when your husband stops coming home for lunch.

A man never realizes how much he cares for you until you let him know how little you care for him.

One guy was so happy with his wife he forgot he was married.

She was vamping him so hard one night that he forgot she was a his wife and asked her to marry him.

Then she broke his heart by showing him their marriage license.

But he said just because they happened to be man and wife he wasn't going to let it spoil their happiness.

It's funny, but marriage breaks up too many romances.

There are no divorces in Heaven because nobody up there is married.

That's what makes it Heaven.

One guy thought he was committing bigamy because he was married to a good cook and a loving wife.

Remember, you can win a husband if you know how to perform in the kitchen, but you can lose him if you don't know how to act in the parlor.

Behind the bars of her cell in Toms River Jail, Lakehurst, N. J., Mrs. Giberson calmly awaits trial on the charge of murdering her husband, a wealthy lumber mag. Police are meantime seeking her alleged accomplice in the crime.

BOSTON WOMAN LIVED DUAL LIFE 2 YEARS

FAIL TO LOCATE ACCOMPLICE OF MRS. GIBERSON

Lakehurst, N. J., Aug. 21.—Efforts of the prosecution in the Giberson case to find a man they say was Mrs. Ivy Giberson's accomplice continued unavailing today.

Mrs. Giberson in the Toms River jail continued her assertion that she is innocent, of any connection with her husband's death. Harold Gs Nun apparently is no longer of interest to the prosecution. He is away on a vacation with his wife.

The "bootlegging" theory has been discarded, and Mrs. Giberson's first husband, John Meehan, is considered out of the case.

When Mrs. Giberson was found after she had sounded an alarm, her hands and feet were tied with twine. Therefore the prosecution declares she had an accomplice and the finding of this person is of first importance.

HELD FOR MURDER, PROBE MAN'S STORY

Lowell, Aug. 21.—John Bedrosian, of Lawrence, who told the police last Wednesday that his companion, Joseph Sarkisian, had been murdered by four men and two girls in the woods near Dracut, was himself arraigned on the charge of murder today in the Lowell Court.

He pleaded not guilty, and was held without bail to August 31.

Sarkisian has been under guard at St. John's Hospital suffering from numerous cuts ever since he related the story of the alleged attack on himself and Sarkisian while they were on a berry-picking expedition. State and local police investigated the story, but found nothing to prove or discredit it. It is believed, however, that Bedrosian and his companion engaged in an argument which was followed by a duel.

KATZ GETS MONTH ON AUTO CHARGE

Alfred Katz of No. 41 Michigan avenue, Dorchester, in Roxbury Court today was found guilty of drunkenness and operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. Judge Palmer made a finding and continued the case until tomorrow in order that Katz might enter an appeal. He is to be sentenced to one month for operating under the influence of liquor and $50 for drunkenness.

POLICE RAID CHARLESTOWN AS LABORERS

Disguised as laborers, a squad of Charlestown police officers made a whirlwind tour of liquor sellers in their district.

Patrolman John S. Welling, having purchased liquor in a near beer saloon on Medford street, was surrounded by a threatening crowd when he announced he was a police officer. He drew his revolver and stood off the crowd, while he placed the bartender, Patrick O'Hara, under arrest.

FINED $100.

In court O'Hara was fined $100.

At the saloon of John J. Buckley, on Chelsea street, Patrolman Welling was temporarily made prisoner. He claims Buckley took him into a back room and sold him a drink. When he said he was a policeman, he silenced, Buckley locked the door, imprisoning him.

Welling drew his revolver and fired a shot through the floor. Sergeant Ivers and other members fired a shot through the door, and arrested Buckley, whose case was continued until Monday night.

The raiders also arrested Frank Deleo, a Bunker Hill fruit dealer, and E. P. Peis of the same street. Peis was fined $50 for selling liquor.

GETS STIFF SENTENCE.

Deleo, who lived in the North End, was sentenced to three months for selling liquor and another month for keeping and exposing it for sale. He appealed and was held in $1,000.

In sentencing Deleo, Judge Sullivan announced that he would give jail sentences to any non-residents of the district brought before him for selling liquor.

BUILDING BOOM SHOWS BIG JUMP

The value of permits granted for new building in thirty-four cities of the State in July was $13,192,747, or 56.3 more than the value in the same cities in July of last year, according to a report made today by the State Department of Labor and Industries.

In Boston the value of new construction work begun was $3,935,021, as compared with $1,864,322 in the same month last year.

Fall River began the construction of $162,466 of tenement houses and in Somerville permits were granted for twenty-one two-family dwellings, to cost $181,000.

THIEF IS CHASED BY WOMEN

Female Store Detectives Race Down Washington Street After Shoplifter

Two women detectives, skirts raised high that they might not impede swift moving legs, electrified a noonday crowd in Washington street today, when they tore through the traffic in a mad chase for an alleged thief.

But George Kropoff, 11 Heath avenue, Jamaica Plain, would have made good his getaway had not Traffic Officer Michael O'Brien lent his aid. He captured the man.

Kropoff, according to the two women detectives, made a private raid on a department store. He took two skirts, four pairs of shoes, combs and shears. Store Detectives Anna Pratt and Alice Courtney followed him from the store, but he suspected them and started to bolt down Washington street. The two girls set out after him and at the corner of Franklin and Washington streets Traffic Officer O'Brien halted all traffic and joined in the pursuit. It is the sixth time that he has made like sp ectacular arrests.

MAN IN GUN ROW WANTED FOR MURDER

Lawrence officers today identified Gustave Raymond at the City Hospital as a man wanted for murder in their city. Raymond was taken to the hospital with his nose shot off, and a bullet in his left hand, following an affray on the Summer street extension bridge.

Gaspare Lentino of Kimball place, South Boston, was arrested for shooting Raymond. It is claimed the men shot at each other several times. As police approached, both buried their revolvers into the harbor.

Lentino was arraigned in South Boston court. He was released in $2,000 bail.

Boy of 11 Falls 50 Feet on Stone Pile and Lives

Falling fifty feet to a pile of crushed stone, eleven-year-old Harry Fowler, son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Fowler, of No. 32 Curtis avenue, West Somerville, narrowly escaped death today. At the Somerville Hospital only bruises and cuts could be found, and unless internal injuries develop, the boy will have practically escaped injury.

He was playing tag, when he ran over the edge of McCarthy's Ledge, Mystic avenue.

UPROAR AT MURDER TRIAL

Witness Shouts "I Won't Return" as He Finishes Black Hand Testimony

Yelling that he would never return to testify, Francesco Biancardi, who took the stand in behalf of Joseph Simboli in the Black Hand murder trial before Judge Dubuque, threw the courtroom into an uproar today.

Prior to that he had been cautioned by the judge to be more temperate in his response to cross-examination of Assistant District Attorney Maurice Caro, who attacked his alibi for Simboli.

"You're crazy," the witness shouted at Mr. Caro. "You don't know what you're talking about."

Biancardi, who is a butcher at No. 142 Marginal street, said Simboli had been employed by him. He admitted he had known him about six months, and said that on the night of the murder of Michael Scarpone, at about 8:30 o'clock, he had called at Simboli's house and seen him in bed.

TELLS OF VISIT.

"He was sick in bed," Biancardi said.

"Were you ever in Simboli's house before the night of January 20, when Michael Scarpone was killed?"

"No!"

"Were you ever in his house after the night when Michael Scarpone was killed?"

"No!"

"Ah! In all the six months that you knew Simboli, you selected the evening that Scarpone was killed to make a visit. Can you speak English?"

"No!" the witness yelled.

Inasmuch as he had spoken in English during his testimony, this caused a laugh.

Mr. Caro showed him a letter written, by the Black Hand to Ferrara, four days after Scarpone was killed, asking him for $1,000 under pain of death. He asked him whether he knew Ferrara.

"Sure. Jimmy Ferrara," said Biancardi.

"How do you know this letter was written to Jimmy Ferrara? It is addressed only 'Dear Ferrara.'"

"Jimmy Ferrara is the only Ferrara I know."

The witness, under cross-examination, said he had attempted to borrow $1,000 from Ferrara.

"He worked with Fonzi and made a lot of money," he said.

"How did you know about this letter from the Black Hand?"

"Ferrara told me."

"Do you know Antonio Mascatti?"

DENIES KNOWING HIM.

The witness looked directly at Mascatti, one of the defendants, and replied: "No."

Previously witnesses had taken the stand in an attempt to establish an alibi for Francesco Toscano.

When Simboli has had his chance to give his defense, the seven defendants in the case, including Luigi DiPadova, who was declared insane during the progress of the case, will have had their hearings, and the case will be ready to go to trial.

His most loyal friend in his hour of need and remorse is his wife, shown here beside his sick bed. She is standing by him, and declares he was simply the victim of circumstances.

DOUGLAS CAN'T GET ANOTHER HEARING

Chicago, Aug. 21 (By International News Service).—"Shufflin' Phil" Douglas, former New York National League pitcher, forever barred from organized baseball by Judge Landis, will not secure a rehearing of his case. It was stated today from Judge Landis' office. "The guilty party has been found and punished and so far as our office is concerned the matter is a closed incident," it was stated.

CITY HOSPITAL TO BE HEATED BY OIL

No more coal will be used to heat the City Hospital after November 1, said Mayor Curley today as he signed a contract for the installation of oil burning apparatus. The award was made to the Petroleum Heat & Power Company, which was the lowest of three bidders at $19,641.

CARUSO'S FATHER-IN-LAW IS DEAD

Stamford, Ct., Aug. 21.—Park Benjamin, widely known patent lawyer, who was the father-in-law of the late Enrico Caruso, died today of heart disease at Shippans Point in his seventy-fourth year. He was editor of the Scientific American and other magazines at various times during his career.

TRAIN 100,000 MEN YEARLY, SAYS HARDING

Washington, Aug. 21.—President Harding today sounded a call for military preparedness, "not that war can be expected, but solely for American preparedness and the continuity of the American republic."

"If I had my way," the President said to 1,000 student soldiers from Camp Meade, Md., who passed in review before him, "instead of 28,000 in training camps, there would be more than 100,000 annually studying and preparing for military service, not that they would be expected to be called upon for such service, but to keep the nation prepared."

The President added that the United States did not contemplate an armed campaign in any direction.

HAVERHILL BOY DIES OF SECOND FRACTURE

Haverhill, Aug. 21.—Funeral services were held today for thirteen-year-old Norman W. Lapierre, whose death followed a few moments after he fell and fractured his leg a second time. The boy was on crutches. Last June he was run over by a city dump cart, sustaining a broken right leg. Walking on crutches he slipped and broke the leg a second time. He died within a few minutes. Medical Examiner Anthony performed an autopsy.

PROBING TOBACCO LABOR

Complaints That Children Under Age Are Being Used Under Investigation

A State investigation of alleged employment of children in the tobacco fields of the Connecticut Valley was begun today under control of Director John P. Meade of the State Department of Labor and Industries.

Hundreds of children, of whom scores are said to be under the legal working age, have been pressed into service to harvest the late tobacco crops in the western section of the State, according to scores of complaints that have reached the State House.

Although there is plenty of adult labor available the tobacco growers are alleged to have exhibited the minors, to whom lower rates of wages are paid.

The crops are said to be especially heavy in Hatfield, Hadley and Sunderland, with plenty of tobacco culture well along in Amherst, Agawam and other towns close to Springfield.

Inspectors of the Department of Labor had already begun a probe of the complaints, but Inspector Meade left today for Springfield to take full control.

TO COMPLETE SEWER WORK IN ALLEYS

The public works department started today installing sewerage work in the public alleys of the Back Bay. In alley No. 925, off Jersey street, $10,879 will be expended and in alley No. 926, between Queensbury and Kilmarnock streets, $4,553. This is part of Mayor Curley's order to the commissioner of public works, Joseph A. Rourke for the clean-up of alleys in the entire city. In the alleys that are made of dirt a smooth pavement will be installed, so that flushing will be made easier. The Mayor also awarded to the Mt. Pleasant Construction Company a contract for a bituithic pavement, in the following streets of Dorchester: Kimhurst, Chesterton and E streets, at a cost of $20,817.

Cost of Living Is 55.6 P. C. Higher Than in 1914

New York, Aug. 21.—The National Industrial Conference Board reported that its investigation of conditions throughout the country shows that the cost of living among wage-earners' families in the United States on July 15, 1922, was 55.6 per cent. higher than in July, 1914.

Between July, 1920, and July 1922, the cost of living decreased 23.9 per cent., the report said.

REVEALS STRANGE CAREER

Husband of South End Suicide Bares Story of Mate's Duplicity; Forgives All

In Roxbury she was Mrs. Ernest Duffy. She lived with her husband in amity and peace.

In Boston, in the South End, she was Mrs. George Walsh.

For two years she lived with both men, as wife, without either of them knowing about the other.

This is the strange history of Mrs. Margaret Duffy, who ended her life in a rooming house at No. 18 Hudson street, by turning on the gas.

The female Jeckyl-Hyde had a pleasure, substantial home in Roxbury.

In Boston she lived in a single miserable room—and there, fearing that her dual life might be discovered, she died.

HUSBAND TELLS STORY.

In the home of his son, Ernest Duffy, the real husband of the woman, was found today by a reporter of the Boston American. Bowed with grief, he told the story of his wife's amazing duplicity.

"It was about two years ago that my wife began to leave home for periods of a week at a time. She told me she was visiting a friend. I knew the friend she mentioned. They had been chums a long time. I believed her. I thought nothing of it.

"I wanted my wife to be happy. I told her to go ahead and visit as frequently as she wished. She would come back to our little home in Roxbury and stay with me for perhaps a week—sometimes for two or three weeks. Then she would say she was going to visit her woman friend and she would go away.

HAD FAITH IN HER.

"I used to think it was funny that she would go so often and stay so long, but I trusted her implicitly and never thought to inquire of the friend regarding her goings and comings. Why should I? I loved my wife and thought she loved me. I never lied to her. I believed the same of her.

"This method of living went on until about two months ago when my wife came to me and said she was going away for good. She said she was tired of our married life and was going to shift for herself. We had no quarrel. There were no hot words. We simply agreed to disagree and she kissed me good-by and left.

"I closed up my home and moved to a rooming house. My heart was broken, but if my wife wanted things that way it was for her to choose. We had been married for twenty-six years and it hit me mighty hard to see her go. She had been a good wife and I had tried to be a good husband. We had seen many days of happiness together.

HAS FORGIVEN ALL.

"Yesterday when I heard she had killed herself with gas I was frantic. Then came the greatest blow of my life—the discovery that she

GIRL TELLS HOW LOVE WON HER CASH

"FIANCE" SENT $ $ TO WIFE

Ida Goldburg Says Her $2,300 Went for Auto and Another Woman

"The Perfect Lover," who it was recently brought out borrowed money from his sweetheart in Boston and sent it to his wife and another woman, has a counterpart in Irving Soloman of Revere.

Pretty 23-years-old Ida Goldberg testified in the Municipal Court today that Irving borrowed money from her with which he paid alimony to his ex-wife and made gifts to another woman.

Miss Goldberg was complainant in a suit against Solomon charging him with the larceny of $2,300. The case is being heard before Judge Dennett.

According to the attractive Miss Goldberg, she met Solomon last December when both were employed as designers in a Boston clothing establishment. They became friends and eventually sweethearts.

PROPOSED; ACCEPTED.

Finally, according to the young woman, Irving proposed marriage and was accepted. An engagement party was given after he had been brought home to meet Miss Goldberg's family.

A short time later Irving approached Miss Goldberg and said: "Ida darling, I should like to go into business but I have only $500. What can a man do in business with $500?"

Miss Goldberg admitted that she could do little, and after some conversation she said she drew $1,000 from the Five Cents Savings Bank and turned it over to Irving. From that time, early in January, until the latter part of March, the young woman succeeded in raising $2,300 more from her friends.

IRVING TIVES IT UP.

This also went into Irving's coffers, and the business was started, with friends doing all they could to help. Irving was not a success at that kind of business and before long he had to give up. He did not give up the money, though, according to Miss Goldberg.

It was then she learned that he was married and divorced, and that he was sending her money as alimony to his former wife. e had also provided himself with an automobile. Checks were produced in court showing that they had gone to the former Mrs. Solomon. Other checks were produced tending to show that Solomon had sent money to another woman. It was then brought out that he was married again.

Asked why she had given all her money to Solomon, Miss Goldberg replied:

"FIRST WIFE IN COURT.

"I was engaged to him and was anxious to see him successful in business. I placed faith in his ability and this is the result."

Irving's first wife was present in court and testified that she was married to him in Russia nine years ago. He deserted her four years ago she said, and she obtained a divorce. He was required to pay alimony but for a long time she received nothing. Eventually the checks in question began to reach her.

Miss Goldberg testified that Irving was extremely economical, explaining that they must save all they could so the business would prosper. On one occasion, she said, he had promised to buy her a diamond ring, but brought a string of beads instead. He said he couldn't afford the ring, and Miss Goldburg testified she replied that it was just as well.

OPEN AIR MARKETS TO FUNCTION AGAIN

Open air public markets where the farmer may sell his products direct to the consumer and cut out the middlemen-pedlars, will once more be seen in Boston.

The stands have never really been discontinued, but they have been sold by pedlars instead of farmers. Mayor Curley is a strong believer in doing away with the middleman's profit, and has ordered that the farmers be allowed the privilege they always had, and has instructed Superintendent of Markets Patrick H. Chisham to install the following open-air public markets:

Tuesday, Aug. 22—Columbus avenue, Roxbury Crossing.

Wednesday, Aug. 23—Central square, East Boston.

Thursday, August 24—Thomas Park, South Boston.

Friday, August 25—Hancock and Roseclair, opposite City Yard.

Saturday, Aug. 26—Monument square, Charlestown.

The Monday market at Jamaica Plain will be discontinued until further notice.

RATTLER USED IN RITE KILLS HOLY ROLLER

Fort Payne, Ala., Aug. 21.—James Wylie Reece, a "Holy Roller" and farmer on Sand Mountain, is dead as the result of being bitten by a rattlesnake. He died thirty minutes after the reptile bit him.

It is said that Reece, on various occasions, had assisted in conducting religious seances in which poisonous reptiles were handled and exhibited by members of the church.

Reece was indicted by the Grand Jury a year or so ago, on a murder charge. It was alleged that he permitted a snake to bite and kill one of his children. When the case came up for trial he was freed, the judge declaring every person in this country should be permitted to serve God according to the dictates of his own conscience and that it was through ignorance that the defendant attempted to practice such religious activities.

Dope Runner Given 2 Years; 6 Addicts Are Set Free

Angelo Oreno is known as a wise guy and a square one.

So it was that he was selected by certain South End dope addicts to purchase morphine for them. Every noon Angelo met his clients at a certain corner, collecte a few dollars apiece from them, and, later, returned with the dope.

But no more will Angelo be their trusted messenger. At least not for a while. For today he was sentenced to two years at Deer Island.

Federal Narcotic Inspector Charles J. Voelker, Detectives Caverly, Conway and Monahan caught Angelo during his rush hour.

Auto Injures Boy

LOVE CULT GETS JOLT, HOMES BROKEN UP

Chicago, Aug. 21.—Chicago's "Temple of Contemplation" where Dr. Albert J. Moore conducts classes in happiness, mending broken homes, has a strictly business atmosphere. It is as severe as a broker's office. No smoking odors, Oriental tapestries or figures of Buddha, but an array of desks, a half dozen typewriters and a large blackboard to which the "home healer" points with a ferule in explaining the mystic truths about domestic happiness.

The "home healing" influence of Dr. Moore's teachings, however, suffered a setback today, when W. W. Talcott, chief prosecuting witness against the happiness cult leader, declared that he and his pretty young wife had separated as a result of her deep interest in esoteric studies at the temple.

PAID $2,900.

Since his discovery that his wife had paid Dr. Moore $2,900 for her lessons in happiness, Mr. Talcott has been living with his parents.

"Our home has been practically broken up," Mr. Talcott said today. "Just as that of Albin Fernha. This fellow Moore has kept our wives out all night. They neglected their homes more and more until neither Fernha nor myself had any home life left."

Mrs. Talcott today signed an affidavit defending Dr. Moore, which, it is said, will be presented at the court inquiry tomorrow in the "Life Institute," as the cult is technically known. Other disciples, among them prominent society women, it is said will testify in Dr. Moore's behalf.

Mrs. Moore, wife of the "home healer" and mother of his seven children, today came to her husband's defense.

"My husband has a clearer and a higher vision, awakened to world suffering. He has the knowledge and understanding as was in Jesus in heaven here and now," Mrs. Moore declared.

DENIES LOVE EPISODES.

Miss Marie Stuart, pretty proprietress of a beauty parlor and a teacher of elementary classes in the Institute, denied a love episode with her "leader."

She was questioned by officials of the state's attorney's office, making a searching inquiry into the workings of the cult.

Miss Stuart, according to Mrs. James H. Cartwright, wife of Supreme Court Justice Cartwright, and a former director of the institute, had declared that she "would yield up her very soul to kiss Dr. Moore." The beauty specialist branded Mrs. Cartwright's testimony as "lies, damnable lies."

HOOTCH, AUTOS AND 2 MONTHS' SENTENCE

Charles Weston of Needham was sentenced to two months in the House of Correction in Dedham Court today for driving an auto while intoxicated. In the same court William H. Slaney was fined $50. It was Weston's second offense.

BLACK CLOTH CAT.

Miss A. L. Graff is shown with the latest Paris fad, a cat made out of black cloth. She and the ersatz feline arrived in New York on the Aquitania.

THIS STILL OWNER SAYS HE'S GUILTY

Joseph R. Spiegel, No. 918 Blue Hill avenue, was fined $50 in Dorchester Court today on a charge of keeping and exposing liquor for sale by Judge Churchill. An additional charge of maintaining a nuisance was placed on file. Spiegel was arrested by Sergeant Gallagher following a raid in which a ten-gallon still, quantities of mash and containers were seized. Spiegel pleaded guilty to both counts.

ASKED FOR KISS, WOMAN SHOOTS SUITOR

New York, Aug. 21.—Mrs. Sarah Berlin, nervous, shaking and weeping in her hysteria, convulsively seized the hand of a Boston American reporter in the matron's room at Jefferson Market prison while she poured out her story of the shooting.

The tale all centered about her mother love for her little baby, but her child of the sun," as she called him. Her statement follows:

"Yes, I shot Moe Schneider, but if ever a distracted woman ever had cause for such an act, I think I had. Moe was named as the co-respondent in my husband's divorce action against me. The court gave my husband the custody of my little boys, who are five and seven years old. I was separated from both my husband and my two children by Moe's love-making.

"My little infant son, Sol, of whom Moe is the father, is just five months old today, and what an anniversary!"

Here Mrs. Berlin broke into a fresh seizure of sobs.

WANTED TO BE RID OF IT.

"The very day my baby was born this man, Moe, telephoned to Dr. Irving Smiler, who is now in Europe, at the Bronx Hospital, and asked him about me and the child. I shall ask the doctor to testify for me in court when he returns."

She said Schneider asked the doctor:

"Can't you get her or get the child in some home in order to get rid of it?"

And the doctor said he had replied to Schneider:

"Why, I don't like to say that to her face. That seems to me kind of a cruelty."

Continuing her story Mrs. Berlin said: "I was at that time and have been since, without any regular source of income, so I appealed to Moe to give me funds so I could properly care for the child. He refused to do so. Then, without telling him about it, I placed the baby in the Infants' Home. I was absolutely heartbroken when I had to relinquish the child, but I could not support him and Moe refused all my requests for aid.

KEPT AWAY FROM MOE.

"I gave him up as hopeless and kept away from him for a time, but he heard finally that I had placed the child in an institution and then he began pursuing me again. Last week he wanted to make an appointment with me for Saturday night and I agreed, for I wanted to settle this matter once and for all.

"On Thursday I started out to find a revolver. I didn't want to kill him, but I had thoughts of wounding him and scaring him, and if all else failed I thought of killing myself possibly. I tried to buy a revolver in several places, but could not get anybody to sell me one.

"I got on an express train and after getting to Philadelphia found a store where they had revolvers in the window.

"I went inside and told the manager I wanted a revolver for self-defense.

"I reached the hotel at 1 o'clock and found Moe there. I sat down in a chair beside the dresser fully dressed and began to talk with him.

LONG ARGUMENT.

"We talked and argued for several hours, and I exhausted all of my reasoning powers to get Moe to see his duty. He was obdurate and indifferent, and said all he cared was about me.

"Here is the picture of the baby. Isn't he a darling? And here is the picture of the man I killed for my baby."

The reporter called Mrs. Berlin's attention to the fact that Schneider was not dead, and that he might even recover. She exclaimed passionately:

"Oh, I pray to God for my baby's sake that he does not die!"

She then continued her story of the shooting:

"Moe begged me to kiss him. I wrapped the revolver in the lace scarf I was wearing, so he wouldn't see it, and then sat down on the edge of the bed. He put up his arms to seize me for a kiss and as he pulled me down I shot him—in the left chest.

TRIED TO KILL SELF.

"At the moment I decided, with a pang, that the best thing for me to do, no matter whether Moe lived, was for me to shoot myself, so I tried to do so, but Moe leaped up and grabbed me.

I was afraid I'd shoot him again and make it a case of murder, so I fired the rest of the five shots in the gun into the wall. When Moe seized me he nearly broke one of my arms in his mad strength. Just see those bruises."

NAME CHARLESTOWN MAN ENGINEER

Several appointments were made today by Mayor Curley. Edward P. Reirden of Charlestown was named as construction engineer in the transit department at $1,700 a year and Frank Flaherty was appointed a visitor in the soldiers' relief department at $1,200. Four laborers were also appointed in the transit department for work on the East Boston tunnel at $4 a day.

BOSTON WOMAN LIVED DUAL LIFE

had been living for two years at the Hudson street house as the wife of another man.

"God, I could not believe it. But facts cannot be pushed aside. The grief of her death is nothing compared to the realization that she had been living with another man while she was still living with me. She is dead now. May she rest in peace. I have forgiven."

Robert Duffy, of No. 95 Union Park street, identified the body as that of his mother. He said he had not seen her since early in July, and added that he did not know where she was living. He did not know his father's whereabouts, he said, but had supposed the father and mother were living together.

Mrs. Julia Nassiff, the landlady, said the woman came to the house about a year ago, accompanied by Walsh. She posed as Mrs. Walsh, the landlady said, and spent only a part of the time in the house. At intervals, for days at a time, she would disappear, and then return, offering no explanation of her absence.

On the night before her death, Mrs. Duffy arrived at the house in a taxicab. The landlady continued, the driver pushed her out and drove rapidly away.

On the following afternoon Michael Nassiff, a roomer, smelled gas. Tracing the odor to Mrs. Duffy's room, he forced entrance and found her lying on her bed, the windows locked and a rubber tubing leading from an open gas jet to the bed. She was fully clothed.

REARED IN RAGS, GIRL NOW HAS $1,250 A DAY

Muskogee, Okla., Aug. 21.—After having spent the nineteen years of her life in the most abject poverty, Exie Fife, Creek Indian of McIntosh County, finds herself with a daily income of $1,250.

So far she has made three purchases, a $2,800 touring car, an $85 saddle for her brother, and a wardrobe trunk. But Exie has had only a very small part of the fortune the size of which is remarkable even in this country of great wealth made over night in the oil fields.

Picture, if you can, the shabbiest of unpainted shacks, standing far back from a dirt road in a grove of trees. Half a mile up the road is Fame, a settlement of two stores and a half dozen houses.

In this setting Exie Fife was born in August, 1903, of full-blooded Creek Indian parents. When she was two years old her parents filed a government claim in her name and she received an allotment of 160 acres of land in Creek and Okfuskee counties.

For seventeen years she received royalties of a few dollars from this land. Then last June an oil well, which made 4,000 barrels, was brought in on Exie's allotment. Two weeks ago another well making 2,000 barrels was brought in, and four more wells are being drilled. All of which makes Exie one of the richest girls in this part of the country.

As Exie says: "Before, no one ever came to see me. No one ever wrote to me. Now people write all the time and many come to see me every day. Isn't it funny?"

New York, Aug. 21.—Pepper Martin's left hand will be insured for $25,000 by his managers, Jimmy Kelly and Johnny Keyes. The policy will hold good until the end of the third round of Martin's bout with Johnny Dundee for the 130-pound championship next Monday night at the New York Velodrome. The men are scheduled to box fifteen rounds.

"Martin's left hand will turn the trick in this bout," said Kelly, "and paying a premium of $2,500 we can insure ourselves for something in case of an accident and we lose the chance of annexing the title."
